Miners Get Opportunity To Parley on Strike Fines

Legal Obstacles May Bar Portal Pay, WLB Indicates In New Opinion

Opportunity to Bargain

By Ben W. Gilbert
Post Staff Writer

Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes yesterday gave the country's soft coal miners a chance to bargain their way out of paying fines for striking while the War Labor Board considered the possibility that legal obstacles existed to the granting of any "portal-to-portal" wage increase.

Ickes pointed out that existing collective bargaining contracts which provide for the collection of $1 and $2 a day fines for striking and other forms of absenteeism also provide for negotiation of any dispute over collection of fines by the individual mine operators and union committees. He said he was issuing instructions to have all such disputes settled in that way.

Levying of the fines for four days of the June 1 to 5 strike drew an angry denunciation from John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, who branded it an "unwarranted, illegal act," taking "nearly three million dollars worth of food from the fingers and mouths of children of the mining camps."

Resulted in Walkouts

The original announcement resulted in walkouts at four Alabama mines employing 615 men in protest.

In addition, a United Mine Workers local at Windber, Pa., last night voted to strike because, said Russell Foltz, its secretary, the board "refused to sanction the $1 30 portal-to-portal pay and because of Secretary Ickes' proposal to deduct $5 from the men's pay."

Nearly 1600 men at three pits voted and approximately 200 workers failed to show up on the first shift scheduled to report after the vote, the Associated Press said.

A. U. M. W. spokesman asserted that the miners would regard the Ickes action yesterday as a mere "sop," not a satisfactory and strike-preventing settlement of the fine issue.

"He should have said, 'My hired hands have made a mistake,'" the spokesman said, "because he is dealing with a lot of people who live in small communities where they have to admit it when they are wrong to get along. As it stands, the action will burden the grievance machinery. All this stuff is just making people in the mining communities sorer and sorer."

June 20 Deadline

It was pointed out that the mines are now operating under a Lewis order to go back to work until June 20.

Existing agreements do not call for any fines in the case of anthracite miners.

If the War Labor Board finds that legal obstacles exist preventing the granting of a "portal-to-portal" pay adjustment, it was regarded as likely that the board would order operators and miners to sign a contract containing present wage rates, allowing the miners increased vacations and other

Asking No Public Hearing, Tawes Admits Violation

Governor Bans Private Use of State Cars; Editor Exposing Case Accused of Libel

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, June 11.—State Comptroller J. Millard Tawes admitted tonight he had violated the pleasure driving ban in making a trip to Georgia in a State-owned car, and asked the State Office of Price Administration "to dispose of the case on the record without a public hearing."

The case came into prominence when Rives Matthews, 26-year-old editor of the Somerset News, Princess Anne, Md., attacked Tawes in the June 3 issue of his paper asserting that Tawes violated the gasoline rationing law to attend a wedding in Georgia. Matthews was arrested Tuesday and released upon $2500 bond after being charged with malicious slander under Maryland's criminal libel statute.

Earlier Gov. Herbert O'Conor announced the appointment of Hooper S. Miles, State treasurer, as supreme authority over the use of State-owned vehicles. He immediately issued an order banning personal use of such vehicles.

Tawes tonight admitted he misused the C ration gasoline coupons allotted to the State car to make a trip from Crisfield, Md., to Fort Benning, Ga., to attend his son's wedding, starting May 23.

He admitted violation of OPA regulations in a signed statement addressed to OPA enforcement attorney Cornelius P. Mundy.

Senate Votes 900 Millions To Agriculture

Bankhead Effort To Get Extra Parity Payments Fails

By Christine Sadler
Post Staff Writer

After soundly defeating efforts of Senator Bankhead (Democrat) of Alabama to write in an amendment prohibiting consideration of soil conservation payments in the setting of price ceilings on farm commodities, the Senate yesterday passed a 900-million-dollar appropriations bill for the Department of Agriculture.

The Alabama farm leader argued that approximately 300 million dollars contained in the bill for "soil conservation" was money granted to farmers for specific work done to conserve soil and in shifting to special war crops. Price ceilings should give the farmers a parity return above this sum, he contended.

The same provision was in the Bankhead bill, vetoed recently by the President as inflationary, and its injection into the Agriculture supply bill churned up hold-the-line philosophies of various complexions.

Club Behind Door

Senator Clark (Democrat) of Missouri said that while he believed in the proposal, he would rather keep it as a "club behind the door" to use when and if the Administration broke the line on wages.

Senator Wheeler (Democrat) of Montana accused his colleagues of being frightened by John L. Lewis. "You are for this amendment, but you are afraid to vote for it," he declared.

"Either the farmers are entitled to parity, or they are not. What John L. Lewis does has nothing to do with this question."

Both Senator Gillette (Democrat) of Iowa and Senator Bankhead

Navy Abandons Standard Oil Lease Deal

Roosevelt Orders Study of Legality; Fund Call Canceled

Attorney General Biddle disclosed yesterday that the Navy has asked withdrawal of its request for $1,748,408 for use in an oil lease transaction with Standard Oil, after President Roosevelt ordered a study of the legality of the agreement.

The withdrawn request was included in an appropriations bill and the item, Biddle said, was to have covered "certain expenses in connection with the contract" between the Navy and Standard Oil of California for development and operation of the Elk Hills naval oil reserve.

Biddle said in a statement that the contract was referred to him "for analysis and recommendation" by Mr. Roosevelt on March 26 "as the result of criticism of the contract, raising doubts as to its legality and propriety."

A detailed analysis has been completed, Biddle said, and, "after further study," recommendations will be submitted to the President.

Senator Langer (Republican) of North Dakota said in the Senate Thursday that the lease was a "give away" under a "hush-hush" contract. A Navy official said, however, that the arrangement was entirely in the national interest and "a good deal" for the Government.

The situation revolves around the ownership by Standard of California of 8300 acres of oil land within the limits of the reserve. The contract provided a payment to Standard for equipment which it had installed in the field, along with the right to one-third of the oil withdrawn, this latter recognizing Standard's ownership of one-third of the land in the field.

The Navy, however, the official

32 More Alleged Violations Of Driving Ban Are Reported

Thirty-two alleged violations of the current ban on pleasure driving were reported to the local OPA yesterday by inspectors, officials announced. The cars were spotted at an alleged gambling house on the Bladensburg Road, officials said.

This brings the total of violations in the District recorded during the present drive to 1047.

Seven alleged cases of violations of gasoline rationing regulations are scheduled for hearings before the local OPA board June 15, John L. Laskey, enforcement attorney, said yesterday.

Three of these will involve dealers who sold gasoline to a Post reporter without demanding—or getting—coupons.

The other four will be cases against dealers who are accused of having been discriminatory in their sales of gasoline.

Yesterday a representative of the Gulf Oil Corporation said that the station at 3000 Nichols Avenue Southeast, where gasoline was bought by a reporter without coupons, was leased by H. P. Dukes, and that, therefore, the Gulf Co. had no responsibility over the transactions of the station.

Laskey said that the OPA would make a check of the stations from which The Post reporter bought gasoline, their records and such, and he expected they would be brought up for hearing on June 15.

Yesterday Eugene George, operator of a filling station at 1801 West Virginia Avenue Northeast, came to The Post and protested that the reporter buying the gasoline at

De Gaulle Walks Out on French Body

Political Circles Say General Quit In Squabble Over Ousting Vichyites

By Thomas C. Watson
By International News Service

London, June 11.—A new crisis in factional French relations was reported tonight to have resulted in the resignation of Fighting French leader Gen. Charles de Gaulle from the week-old French National Committee of Liberation.

French political circles in Algiers revealed that De Gaulle resigned his co-chairmanship of the committee this afternoon when his demand for the ouster of alleged Vichy elements from military and political ranks resulted in a deadlock.

The committee was said to have suspended future meetings and efforts now are under way to seek a compromise to overcome the government's first internal crisis.

Meeting Cancelled

[The Associated Press, asserting that De Gaulle had threatened to resign, said merely that he absented himself from yesterday's meeting of the committee, and as a result the meeting was canceled. This action, observers were quoted as saying, would not necessarily mean a complete collapse of the unification movement because whatever De Gaulle's own action might be, his chief representative, Foreign Affairs Chief Rene Massigli, would undoubtedly remain as member of the committee. One sore spot in the negotiations was declared to be the fate of some 150 generals De Gaulle has tabbed as Axis collaborationists.]

Radio France at Algiers, official voice of high Commissioner Gen. Henri Giraud, confirmed that De Gaulle "definitely tendered his resignation." But Fighting French circles in London had no information on recent developments, and thought it "highly unlikely" De Gaulle had resigned.

Concentrated Air Power Points Way to Victory, General Says

Maj. Gen. James H. Doolittle, commander of the Strategic Air Force in North Africa, last night said the conquest of Pantelleria "is definitely a landmark in the history of military aviation."

Not an Allied soldier, nor a gun, nor a tank was on the island when the end came, and it was the first complete air victory over a land force since wars began.

Army officers here, pointing up the terrific weight behind the Allied air blows, said that during one hour alone on Thursday a larger tonnage of bombs was dropped on Pantelleria than the Japanese hurled at the fortress of Corregidor from the beginning of the Pacific war until the Manila Bay island's fall six months later.

1650 Tons Dropped Thursday

Thursday's tonnage of bombs that shook the Italian island totaled 1650 tons—three times the weight of explosives dropped on London in its worst night of the blitz. British-based R. A. F. planes have dropped more bombs on a single German city in one operation, but at no time was the target as small as Pantelleria.

Il Duce's imitation Gibraltar was reduced to surrender because the Allied air fleets—75 per cent American—wrought so much destruction that even its rock-sheltered defenses were shattered, and what is more important, the admitted lack of water made the garrison's burden more than it could endure.

"No Surprise" to Doolittle

Asserting that the results were "no surprise" to him, Doolittle said simply:

"It was merely a proposition of steadily increasing the Pantelleria bombardment to a point at which it was physically impossible for them (the defenders) to stand up under it.

"The capitulation proved conclusively that no agency can stand up under the prolonged, concentrated bombardment of properly selected objectives."

Naval guns played a minor role in the victory. The main attack against the fortress was made by the airmen, who in the words of Doolittle destroyed "one by one" the antiaircraft batteries and coast artillery guns with a creeping barrage similar to well employed artillery backing up an advance by

U. S. Bombers Renew Blows At Nazi Bases

Wilhelmshaven and Cuxhaven Pounded By 200 Heavy Craft

By the Associated Press

London (Saturday), June 12.—A formation of more than 200 American heavy bombers renewed the Allied aerial offensive against western Europe yesterday by smashing at German shipyards and port installations at Wilhelmshaven and Cuxhaven.

The big four-engined bombers flew a round trip of more than 600 miles without a fighter escort, and an Eighth United States Air Force communique said eight of them failed to return.

One large section of the American sky fleet smashed through swarms of enemy fighters to blast the submarine yards at Wilhelmshaven. The communique said the bombers shot down a "large number" of challenging enemy planes.

"Unescorted by fighters, a large force penetrated to the U-boat yards at Wilhelmshaven against strong enemy opposition while a second formation attacked harbor installations and submarine yards at Cuxhaven," the communique said.

It was the first concentrated attack on Hitler's European Fortress by heavy bombers from British bases since May 29, when American Flying Fortresses and Liberators struck a triple daylight blow at St. Nazaire, La Pallice and Rennes in France and the R. A. F. followed up with a devastating night assault on Wuppertal in Germany.

Yesterday's raid was the fifth by American heavies on Wilhelmshaven but their first on Cuxhaven, 30 miles away to the northeast.

The R. A. F. added to yesterday's renewal of Allied aerial blows with daylight sweeps in which fighters attacked enemy targets in France and Holland and Ventura bombers battered the coke ovens and fuel depots at Zeebrugge in Belgium.

Later in the day, Spitfires which swept over the Abbeville and St. Pol areas of northern France, ran into several squadrons of Axis fighters, shooting down three of them.

Oust Fascists, Roosevelt Urges Italians

Promises Choice of Government if They Also Evict Nazis

President Roosevelt yesterday made an appeal to the Italian people to do away with Mussolini's Fascist regime and drive the Germans from their soil. After that, he promised, the United Nations would see to it that they should have freedom to choose whatever kind of government they might wish.

News of the surrender of Pantelleria was brought to the President with his breakfast tray about 8:30 yesterday morning in the form of a message from Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, who told him "white flags" were flying over the island, and that the Italians said they were giving up because they did not have enough water.

This good news prompted the President to jot down some notes, from which he began to read as soon as his Friday press conference got under way later in the morning.

The island which Italy had come to call her own Gibraltar was now in the hands of the British and Americans. He said, adding that this seemed to offer him an opportunity to say a word to the Italian people.

Inevitable Result

First he thought they should be reminded that the effect upon them of the current Anglo-American campaign was a perfectly logical and inevitable result of the ruthless course their Duce has pursued. The President said Mussolini had betrayed his own country to the Germans in his struggle for his own aggrandizement and power.

Italy's plunge into this war, he went on, had not been an act of the Italian people. It had been done by their Fascist regime in their name. By and large he thought the Italians a people devoted to peace. He recalled the "stab in the back" speech made at Charlottesville, Va., three years ago

First Step

By Daniel De Luce
Associated Press Staff Writer

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, June 11.—Pantelleria capitulated today under staggering Allied aerial blows—the first time any air force ever reduced a fortress and beat its garrison into surrender alone.

American fighter planes then smashed a strong German dive-bomber attack on British troops who completely occupied the Italian outpost isle 22 minutes after their noon landing.

The dazed garrison on the stepping-stone of invasion hoisted the white flag of unconditional surrender at 11:40 a. m. (5:40 a. m. Eastern war time) after the greatest concentrated aerial assault in history.

The fortress island thus was the first metropolitan Italian territory to yield to the Casablanca formula.

British warships standing in the rain off Pantelleria lowered invasion barges, shock troops clambered into them just before noon and headed for the coast despite the strong but futile German air attack.

The Germans used from 50 to 60 dive-bombers, a force which suggested they had been awaiting such a development.

But the ever-present American Lightning fighters tore into the German formations, forcing them to jettison their bombs haphazardly.

Warships Apparently Untouched

Dispatches from a United States fighter base quoted airmen as saying they didn't see a single German bomb hit either a barge or warship.

By 12:22 p. m., the British troops had occupied all points.

This was the quickly drawn climax of 19 days of continuil bombing by Allied air fleets and supporting broadsides hammered into the shore installations at least a half dozen times by the British fleet. The aerial pounding was credited with the final reduction of the fortress.

(London estimates placed the garrison at 8000 Italians.)

British troops landing under the cover of naval guns met a little resistance from scattered enemy defenders, who were shelled by British cruisers and destroyers.

The commander of the Axis garrison apparently had been unable to inform all his troops of the surrender before the invasion began, and some of the more isolated posi-

Vegetable Packers' Subsidy Approved to Meet Wage Rise

Subsidies to vegetable packers, so they can pay proposed wage increases pending before the War Labor Board without raising the price of canned foods to consumers, were approved yesterday by Fred M. Vinson, director of economic stabilization.

In this, first major action in his new job, Vinson runs head-on into the angry demands of Congress that the Government's subsidy program be curtailed.

He said the subsidies would be granted packers of essential cost-of-living items, namely green peas, snap beans, sweet corn, canned tomatoes and other primary tomato products.

This will be the first subsidy to compensate for wage increases in the food industry and it will be paid by the Commodity Credit Corporation, which already is expending 25 million dollars to enable packers to give farmers increased returns on their 1943 crops of the four items while the consumer prices remain at 1942 levels.

In his directive to the food and price agencies, Vinson said increased "raw material costs and approved wage rate increases" in connection with canning of "minor vegetables" could be reflected in higher ceiling prices, if this should be necessary to assure processors the margins required by law.

Since the Office of Price Administration has placed 1943 ceilings on only tomatoes, peas, beans and sweet corn packs, this ruling caused observers to believe other vegetables would go on the market at higher than 1942 prices.

Another provision in the Vinson ruling stated the Government, in its purchases of war foods, would pay the higher prices necessitated by wage increases—and not share in the subsidy.

Meanwhile President William Green of the American Federation of Labor yesterday demanded two billion dollars a year subsidy program be inaugurated to push living costs back to the levels of 13 months ago.

Appearing before the Senate Banking and Currency Committee, which has approved a bill prohibiting use of CCC funds for food subsidies, Green predicted a "spontaneous revolt" of workers unless the cost of living is cut.

The only alternative to the cut, he declared, would be to increase the "Little Steel" formula governing wage increases "percent for percent of our failure to cut the cost of living down to the May, 1942, levels." Price Administrator Brown has promised he would roll back living costs to last September 15 levels.

"The workers of the Nation feel their Government has gone back on its promise to extend them equality of treatment in cost of living control," the A. F. of L. chief declared.

Although the wage subsidy to packers will be the first in the food industry, it is the third ordered as a cost of living control.

The first came several months ago when the existing subsidy paid

Fruits and Vegetables Released for Civilians

WPB yesterday released for civilians seven types of canned fruits and vegetables which heretofore had been restricted to Government purchase. Applesauce, blueberries (or huckleberries), figs, beets, carrots, pumpkins and squash from the 1943 pack will be made available to civilians.

Previously canners were only permitted to pack these products in cans in sufficient quantities to meet Government requirements.

150 Enemy Craft Blasted

700 Soviet Planes Hammer Nazi Airfields Along Front

By the Associated Press

London (Saturday), June 12.—An attack in tremendous force by more than 700 Soviet planes on German airdromes along the Russian front, in which 150 Nazi craft were destroyed or damaged, was reported early today by Moscow while action aground was confined to isolated but bloody skirmishes.

The Russian raid, said a Moscow broadcast recorded here by the Soviet monitor, set off fires and explosions in a series of enemy air bases and 19 Russian planes were lost in the operation.

In addition, 10 German planes were shot down in aerial battles near the airdromes where gasoline and ammunition dumps were seen burning.

Another German raid on the Volga River industrial city of Gorki was reported but it was declared that enemy bombs "were dropped at random" and seven of the attackers were shot down without loss to the Russian defenders.

Afield, said the midnight Soviet communique recorded here, Russian aviation also was active, cutting up two companies of German infantry in a single operation.

German reconnaissance groups probing the Russian defenses on the front west of Moscow were thrown back in sharp local actions, and in the far south, in the sector west of Rostov, said the Soviet command, continued German efforts to reach better positions were beaten down.

Similar actions were reported in sectors running all the way up to Leningrad.

Allies' Tunisian Losses Exceeded In New Guinea

New York, June 11 (INS).—Australian Foreign Minister Herbert V. Evatt declared in a radio address tonight that American and Australian casualties in the successful New Guinea offensive exceeded total Allied casualties suffered in the entire Tunisian campaign.

Evatt said his estimate of Allied casualties in New Guinea included soldiers incapacitated by tropical diseases. Men so afflicted, he asserted, "numbered four or five times" the total casualties suffered in actual battle.

(The Australian Foreign Minister's figures would indicate American and Australian casualties in New Guinea in excess of 55,000. American casualties in Tunisia have been announced as totaling 18,558, while Prime Minister Winston Churchill recently declared British casualties in that campaign, totaled 37,000.

Pantelleria Yields To Air Pounding

Biggest Nazi Raid on London Was Puny Compared to Massed Attack on Isle

Admiral Paresseni, senior Italian officer on the island, sent a message to an American air base saying:

"Beg surrender through lack of water."

An American fighter pilot flying over the splintered Italian fortress also saw white flags draped at the wrecked harbor area and the gaping airfield.

That was at 11:40 a. m., only 20 minutes before the expiration of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's third ultimatum.

Lieut. Gen. Carl A. Spaatz, commander of the Northwest Africa Air Force, had sent Pantelleria the first surrender demand Tuesday, and a final one yesterday afternoon on behalf of General Eisenhower.

"In order to avoid further useless loss of life, the commander in chief (Eisenhower) invites your excellency to cease all resistance and surrender the garrison of the island to the forces under my command," said the note which gave the Italians six hours to decide.

"As one soldier to another," General Spaatz added: "Your excellency must know as I do that resistance under the present circumstances, however heroic, is utterly hopeless.

Before they gave up the battle, the Pantellerians had seen every coastal gun in the island's outer perimeter of defenses blasted into ruins, every fortification of its inner defense ring smashed, its lone air field pitted by thousands of huge bomb craters and its town and dock area leveled.

The cracking of the ring of fortified islands guarding southern Europe gave the Allies a bridgehead from which to direct their assault on other Mediterranean strongholds.

Sicily in Fighter Range

It is 45 miles from Africa and 60 miles from Sicily. Thus Sicily itself is brought within range of Allied fighter planes, which could not carry enough gasoline to fly from Tunisia, cover Allied landings and return to African bases if they engaged enemy planes in combat. The victory also widened Allied control of the Mediterranean narrows, prying wider open the inland sea bottleneck.

In effect, by occupying Pantelleria the Allies by-passed Lampedusa Island, some 90 miles to the south, which remains to be reduced.

When the surrender came, the British troops which had to be held in readiness for either the island's capitulation or continued resistance were transported quickly to its shore by Allied warships.

In the last 13 days of the punishing aerial bombardment, termed officially an all-out offensive, Allied airmen destroyed 78 Axis planes while losing 12 of their own.

General Spaatz's fliers, most of them Americans flying American-built planes, in effect built a bridge of bombers over the 45 miles of Mediterranean to Pantelleria.

Bombardment Grows

Enemy planes made desperate, futile attacks on this bridge, but the smashing bombardment grew instead of diminishing.

On three successive days before the end came, Allied warplanes dropped demands for surrender and as each appeared to be ignored the rain of bombs became a torrent.

Yesterday the thundering Allied air armada of Flying Fortresses, Marauders, Mitchells, Baltimores, Bostons, Lightnings, Warhawks and Spitfires launched a continuous round of assaults by daylight after Wellingtons and Hurricanes had carried on the attacks all night.

The smoke and dust boiled into heavy brownish clouds which rolled over Pantelleria like a storm.

Today the storm continued through the morning. When the first signal of surrender appeared, Fortresses, Mitchells and Marauders were blasting the target areas.

From May 29 to June 10, Pantelleria was punished with a greater tonnage of bombs than was dropped on all targets in the Mediterranean theater during the entire month of May.

The island was of particular importance to the Axis, in spite of its small size of 32 square miles. It served as a base for submarines and small naval craft. Its airport once supplied fighters and bombers for raids on Malta and Allied shipping.

Political Segment of Sicily

Pantelleria is a part of Trapani Province, making it politically a segment of Sicily.

Approximately 4 miles wide and 8 miles long, the island had heavy gun emplacements, well concealed lighter batteries and underground rock hangars for planes.

(Hours after the fall of the island, Axis radios had not confirmed its surrender, although a Berlin broadcast quoted a Rome dispatch which described the stand of the Pantelleria garrison in past tense.

(This broadcast spoke of the difficulties of defending the island, saying its garrison "achieved miracles of gallantry and devotion to duty."

(Later, the Rome radio broadcast a news bulletin saying "Pantelleria is being hammered almost without interruption by enemy air forces."

(A Berlin transocean broadcast said German military circles withheld comment on "British reports alleging capitulation of Pantelleria."

(In another Rome broadcast, Umberto Gugliemotti, Italian national councillor, ignored the fall of Pantelleria but, speaking in a solemn voice, declared that "it was due to Italian gallantry that until now Europe has been unviolated."

("From his cruel air raids against Italy, the enemy will go to vaster and more complex actions," Guglielmotti said. He added that "Italy has to face navies which are four times as strong as her own."

("We are face to face with the greatest power in the world—the British Navy," he concluded.)

Air Power Is Key, Doolittle Says

The pattern of bombs crept up from the sea like lava in reverse on that volcanic island, until the greatest part of the defenders were knocked out—in an operation Doolittle predicted "precedes future operations which can only culminate in the complete capitulation of Germany and Japan."

"Pantelleria was not an area bombardment," the general was quoted by the Associated Press as saying in North Africa. "It was a job of taking out specific targets both by day and night in a logical, sequential order.

"For instance, our first objective was to take out the enemy antiaircraft to permit our own aircraft to operate with greater freedom. The next objective was the destruction of coast artillery batteries which were knocked out one by one. This, together with the destruction of the port and other facilities, made it evident to those on the island the futility of any further attempted resistance.

"Care was also taken to obviate the possibility of reinforcement or replacement by water or airborne craft. In simple terms, if you destroy what a man has and remove the possibility of bringing more in, then in due course of time it becomes impossible for him to defend himself.

"The results are self-explanatory. The island capitulated."

The Last Word

Text of Spaatz Letter Asking Surrender

By the Associated Press

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, June 11.—The official text of an ultimatum issued Tuesday to the Pantelleria garrison by Lieut. Gen. Carl A. Spaatz, Allied Northwest African Air Force commander, which is almost identical with yesterday's final surrender note:

To His Excellency, the Governor and Commander of the Armed Forces of Italy on the Island of Pantelleria:

Excellency:

On behalf of General Eisenhower, commander in chief in North Africa, I have ordered the bombardment to be suspended six hours in order to communicate to Your Excellency the following message:

In order to avoid further useless loss of life, the commander in chief invites Your Excellency to cease all resistance and surrender the garrison of the island to the forces under my command.

In case Your Excellency should not accept this invitation the attacks will be resumed on a much larger scale and will be carried out without respite until all resistance is ended.

"One Soldier to Another"

In the message of my commander in chief which I have the honor of transmitting to Your Excellency, I take the liberty of adding an appeal as one soldier to another.

Your Excellency must know as I do that resistance under the present circumstances, however heroic, it utterly hopeless.

Owing to the overwhelming superiority of the Allied forces, which the Italian supreme command has admitted, and in view of the fact that blockade makes it impossible for reinforcements to arrive, there is no dishonor when one has fulfilled one's duty in accepting an offer motivated by common sense and a desire to avoid useless bloodshed which Your Excellency as a senior officer must feel as I do.

In case Your Excellency decides to accept the invitation of the Allied commander in chief I ask Your Excellency:

To immediately give orders to all units, land, sea and air, to cease resistance and abandon all military installations, which are to be left intact.

To expose a white cross visible from the air in the center of the airfield, in the port a white flag visible from sea.

To take necessary steps to receive my officers in order to arrange with them for the orderly transfer of the governmental powers of the island. These officers will arrive either by air with escort fighters and will land on the airfield, or aboard a destroyer which will dock at the port and which will also be escorted by fighters.

If, at 6 o'clock this evening, Italian time, the two aforementioned signals have not been observed I will be obliged to believe that your excellency has not accepted the invitation of the Allied Commander in Chief and there will be nothing for me to do but give orders that the attacks be resumed and be carried out inexorably with all the means at my disposal.

May your excellency accept the expression of my highest esteem, Carl Spaatz, lieutenant general, U. S. A.

Eisenhower's Forecast Found Conservative

By Relman Morin
Associated Press Staff Writer

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, June 11.—Even Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower was too conservative this time.

Standing on the bridge of a British cruiser last Tuesday under heavy fire from big Italian shore rifles of Pantelleria—which sent shells to within 300 yards of the warship—the general said he was sure the island would fall once infantry had landed.

Actually it fell in a formal sense before the infantry every got there.

Assault parties encountered some resistance from pockets of troops to whom the island commander's decision to surrender apparently was not communicated promptly.

But the real capitulation, with the traditional white flag flying, took place before.

The warship which carried the Allied commander in chief in North Africa last Tuesday was closer to the island than any of the others in the British squadron when he made his prediction.

Beside him on the bridge was Admiral of the Fleet Sir Andrew Browne Cunningham, Allied naval commander in the Mediterranean.

The squadron's mission, it was stated authoritatively, was to test the fire of the shore batteries at close range.

While big shells dropped all around them, the two commanders witnessed a naval bombardment which was synchronized with a tremendous aerial bombing.

During all of this they saw a torpedo-carrying seaplane race into the innermost part of the harbor on a "test run" and return untouched.

Italy Urged to Evict Fascists and Nazis

Once Mussolini had taken them into the war, the President continued, the Italian people had no choice but to prosecute it.

It was then he came to the appeal which he thought it opportune to make to the Italian people through the press and radio channels.

Free to Choose

He believed he could speak for all the United Nations in telling the Italians that when their Fascist regime had been thrown out he could assure them of their freedom to choose any form of government they wished, though, of course, that could not be done until Hitler's troops had left their territory.

It was the intention of the United Nations, the President continued, to restore Italy to her real place as a free country, and as a respected member of the family of nations. He emphasized the adjective "respected" in a special repetition.

When the Germans have been driven out of Italy and Fascism has been abolished, only then, he concluded, would the good judgment of the Italian people themselves become evidence.

Bill Would Allow Both Man, Wife In Postal Service

A bill to permit husbands and wives both to be employed in the postal service was introduced in the Senate yesterday by Senator Mead (Democrat) of New York.

Back in 1932 Congress tried to spread the work by forbidding joint employment in the postal service. Now, with war making increasing inroads on postal personnel, the move is underway to backtrack on that legislation.

Mead's bill provides that any person discharged under Section 213 of the 1932 Economy Act may be reinstated, receiving a grade and salary equal to that he left.

The bill further provides that if any person discharged in accordance with this act has worked three years or more as a substitute clerk—as many did—he or she will receive the difference between the salary earned as a substitute and that he would have earned as a regular employe upon return to the postal service.

Sterilization of Jews Draws Protest From Dutch Clergy

London, June 11 (AP).—Aneta, Netherlands news agency, said today that church leaders of all denominations in Holland joined in a letter to Reich Commissioner Arthur Seysz-Inquart protesting against newly-instituted sterilization of Jews as "a violation of divine commandment, as well as human rights."

Aneta said the text of the protest, received here today, was signed by all of Holland's religious bodies, including the Netherlands Reformed Church, the Roman Catholic Church, the Three Calvinist Churches, the Mennonite Church, the Remonstrant Congregation and both Evangelical - Lutheran Churches.

Aneta quoted reports from Holland which said that sterilizations so far have been confined to Jews married to Christian women who have not yet borne children.

Backs 3-Power Unity

Russia formally assured the United States last night that Anglo-American-Russian cooperation being forged in this war will "grow and extend" in the postwar period.

Soviet Foreign Commissar V. Molotov, in a message to Secretary of State Cordell Hull in connection with the first anniversary of the signing of the Mutual Aid Pact, said the Russo-American Mutual Aid Pact, otherwise known as the Master Lend-Lease Agreement, "constitutes one of the cornerstones on which rests the military might of the whole Anglo-Soviet-American coalition.

"As a result of these joint struggles and on the basis of a common victory, cooperation between the Soviet Union, the United States and Great Britain will grow and extend in the interests of all freedom-loving people into the postwar period as well."

Only Indian Priest In U.S. Here; Prays At House Session

Resplendent in his tribal headdress, the Rev. Philip Gordon, full-blooded Chippewa Indian priest, yesterday offered the invocation at the opening of the House session.

Father Gordon is pastor of St. Patrick's Roman Catholic Church, Centuria, Wis., member of the Bad River Band in the Great Lakes area, and the only full-blooded Indian priest in the United States. He is a descendant of Chief Hole-in-the-Day, famous Indian war chief of Minnesota. He came here at the invitation of Representative Alvin E. O'Konski (Republican), Congressman from his district of Wisconsin.

U. S. Fighter Planes Batter Jap Craft Over Hengyang

By the Associated Press

Chungking, June 11.—American fighters sailed into 44 Japanese planes yesterday over Hengyang in Hunan Province, shot down one enemy bomber and probably destroyed five others, Central News Agency reported today.

Eight Japanese bombers escorted by 16 Zeros first swept over Hengyang shortly after noon, but failed to hit the American airdrome, their probable objective, it was said. American fighters quickly rose to meet them.

The agency reported that seven Japanese locomotives had been destroyed by United States fliers since they began active support of Chinese ground forces on May 28.

New Ground Successes

On the ground, new Chinese successes were reported in fighting northeast of Ichang and northwest of Hankow as authorities officially thanked American army fliers for helping turn the Japanese drive on the upper Yangtze into a rout last week.

Field dispatches said Chinese troops had occupied Wangchiachang, northeast of the big Japanese base at Ichang, after an all-night clash in which 300 enemy troops were killed and many others, including a regimental commander, wounded.

The Chinese also were reported to have broken into Yingshan, an important town about 90 miles northwest of Hankow.

Bitter fighting was reported in progress north of Tungting Lake, where the Japanese counter-attacked two days ago after receiving reinforcements.

Fierce Air Fighting

Central News reported that fierce aerial dogfights raged over Hengyang Thursday as the Japanese attempted to blast the city with 30 planes, but offered no details.

Indications were that the Japanese might be preparing to launch a fresh drive on the upper Yangtze. Transports laden with munitions and other war supplies were reported moving up the river and returning downstream with wounded Japanese from the West Hupeh front.

Recognition Awaits D.C.'s Ideal Father

Father's Day, founded in 1910 to honor American dads, was inspired by Mrs. John Bruce Dodd of Spokane, Wash., who was irked by the songs of the day—"Everybody Works but Father" and "Father, Dear Father, Come Home With Me Now."

She was inspired to create a Father's Day tribute during a Mother's Day sermon. She told the pastor of her idea and he encouraged her, but she could get only two names to her petition to the Spokane Ministerial Association. Later, however, the association adopted the idea and it received Nation-wide publicity.

Indorsed by Coolidge

Former President Calvin Coolidge, in 1924, was the first Chief Executive to indorse the national observance of Father's Day. This year it is to be celebrated on June 20, and as a traditional part of its local observance, The Post will choose ideal father in the Washington area, nominated by letters from wives and children and neighbors.

From Miss Bernice B. comes this letter describing her own selection for the typical dad:

"My father provided wonderful educations for three of us children at a time when funds in the bank were practically nil. He deprived himself and mother of many comforts to enable us to go to fine colleges so that we might not have to work as hard as he—a tailor—has for everything.

"In addition, he saw to it that his children were well versed in the Bible, sending them to Sunday school, seeing that they were confirmed, and providing my youngest brother and me with a musical education.

Pal of Pals

"Dad has always been the greatest of pals to us and our friends. He has always welcomed all our friends to the house and is a great favorite with them; he can tell a joke as well as any of us and laugh as heartily.

"His advice has never failed us. We were never told we 'must' do a thing—we were merely told or given reasons why we should or shouldn't do some thing and from then on it was our responsibility. Because of that we have never done anything that he would be ashamed of, for he is as proud of us as we are of him.

"In short, he has been to us the greatest pal imaginable—besides the greatest and dearest Dad."

All letters must be postmarked no later than midnight June 15 and should be addressed to Father's Day Editor, The Washington Post.

Four Jap Bombers Blasted in Battle Over Solomons

Marine and Army fighter planes shot down four Japanese Mitsubishi bombers in the southeastern Solomons Thursday, the Navy reported yesterday, and Army planes attacked enemy positions at Vila in the central Solomons.

An Advanced South Pacific Base, (Delayed), June 10 (AP).—American war planes shot down a total of 38 Japanese planes in two air battles over the Solomon Islands this week, outscoring the enemy by better than five for one. American losses numbered only seven planes.

South Pacific headquarters reported today a recapitulation showed 23 Japanese planes were shot down Tuesday when American fighters intercepted a force of between 40 and 50 Zeros and enemy dive bombers over the Russell Islands, now developed as the northernmost American base in the Solomons.

(A Navy Department communique issued June 8 announced that U. S. planes shot down 19 Zeros over the Russell Islands at a cost of 7 American planes.)

A headquarters spokesman said the original bag of 19 enemy planes was increased to 23 and that 4 of the 7 American pilots shot down were rescued later.

One Zero Rammed

The spokesman also reported that one of the Zeros brought down was destroyed by ramming. He said that the American plane which had rammed the enemy was lost and that the action probably was a case in which there was nothing much else to do.

In a raid against Japanese shipping off Bougainville Island in the northwestern Solomons Sunday, 15 intercepting enemy fighters were shot down and six more were damaged, with all American planes returning safely to base. An enemy destroyer was sent to the bottom in this action.

Miners Get Chance To Skip Fines

small adjustments already granted said to be worth 25 cents a day.

It was pointed out that WLB ordered the operators and miners to bargain out any possible legal claim for portal-to-portal pay arising under the Fair Labor Standards Act, but specified that they were not to agree to any settlement that would contain a "hidden" wage increase. Lewis reached an agreement with the Central Pennsylvania Coal Producers Association on a $1.30 a day portal to portal increase, but failed to secure an agreement with any other operators.

Senator Edward R. Burke, spokesman for the Southern Appalachian coal operators, told the board that he was ready to take his chances in the courts, at a public hearing Thursday.

Original Order

The board's original order calling for bargaining on the issue stated:

"It is not within the province of the National War Labor Board to determine whether or not in this case the law requires payment for all time spent underground. . . . This controversy over portal-to-portal pay presents a mixed question of law and fact which, in the absence of a specific court determination binding on those parties, can and should be settled by them in collective bargaining."

Board questioning at the public hearing indicated that the board was greatly interested in this and other legal questions. Following the hearings, the board took the case under advisement and prepared to render a final decision. Such a decision is expected sometime next week.

Davis Raises Question.

Chairman William H. Davis raised the question of any liability to pay for the first five hours of portal to portal time each week because the Fair Labor Standards Act requires overtime payment for work over 40 hours a week, while the coal mines are operating on a basic 35-hour week. If the board were to accept a Bureau of Labor Statistics survey estimating portal to portal "travel time" at 48 minutes a day, nothing would be due the miners. The miners contend, however, that an hour and a half of "travel time" is involved.

The fate af the miner's wage demands was clearly bound up in the weight being given by the board to these legal questions.

900 Millions Voted For Agriculture maintained the amendment would not raise prices but would prevent a rollback at farm levels.

"The OPA has an order prepared that would place rollback ceilings on both cotton and wheat," Bankhead declared.

Bankhead not only failed to receive the two-thirds majority needed to bring his amendment to a vote, but he failed to receive a bare majority. The vote on his motion to suspend the rules was 36 to 37.

The agriculture bill goes to conference containing approximately 200 million dollars more than was appropriated by the House.

The Senate yesterday wrote in amendments providing 50 million dollars for free lunch and milk program for school children and 25 million dollars for the War Food Administration.

In addition, it raised the 20 million dollars of the Rural Electrification Administration to 30 million dollars.

Another large addition was 130 million dollars granted the Farm Security Administration, which had been eliminated by the House and its activities given to the Farm Credit Administration.

Army, Navy Promise to Halt Zoot Riots

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, June 11.—Commanding officers of the Army and Navy in this section in separate statements today pledged their efforts to stamp out rioting in Los Angeles and its environs in which men of the armed services have participated in the last week.

The outbreaks have been between servicemen and some civilians on one side, and groups of zoot-suited juveniles on the other.

Rear Admiral D. W. Bagley, commandant of the Eleventh Naval District, in a telegram to Consul General Alfredo Elias Calles said "I already have acted to cope with the deplorable situation."

Earlier Maj. Gen. Maxwell Murray, commanding the southern California sector of the Western Defense Command, in a statement promised military punishment for any soldiers guilty of riotous conduct.

There was a lull in the disorders, although civil and military authorities still were vigilant.

Detroit, June 11 (AP).—Sporadic fights involving high school students and some 65 zoot suit wearers displaying white arm bands occurred in Detroit's northwest section last night, police reported today. Several groups were dispersed by police squad cars from three precincts.

Only injury reported was that of an unnamed high school boy said to have been knifed in the arm.

Observers reported some of the zoot suiters were armed with clubs, knives and auto irons. A zoot suit was ripped off one youth by high school students who smashed a window of an automobile in which he had locked himself.

Redgy Mulliville, former Cooley High School student, said the fights were an outgrowth of a dispute that started last Sunday at a dance.

his station without coupons had promised to send him some of the ration tickets, when those the reporter was supposed to have became due.

He also asserted that the reporter had told him he was going to visit a sick wife in Philadelphia.

Both the reporter and the photographer denied having made any statement relative to the need of visiting a sick wife and also denied that any coupons had been promised.

Also, George said, he had checked the license number of the car at the Ninth Precinct station. At No. 9 station police said they would not reveal the owner of a car's tag number unless the car had been involved in an accident or a violation of the law. (The car belonged to The Post and is used by the photographic department.)

In addition, the precinct station clerk reported there had been no inquiry about any car between the hours of 4 p. m. and midnight Wednesday.

Post Starlight Concert Series Indorsed by Recreation Unit

The Post Starlight Concert series, which will provide thousands of Washingtonians with a source of excellent entertainment, was yesterday indorsed by the newly formed Federal Recreation Committee at a meeting of Government agency representatives to set up the organization and elect officers.

Marshall Stalley of the War Department was named president of the committee, with Mrs. Margaret S. Edwards of the State Department, vice president, and Miss Betty Reese Coffee of the Department of Labor, secretary.

Initial Attempt

Organization of the group marks the first attempt to bring the various Federal agencies together to map jointly recreation programs for Government employes. "This is not a coordinating agency to coordinate what is already coordinated." President-elect Stalley declared yesterday. "We shall try to determine the recreational needs of these workers in their leisure time, to work out the problems of eating, dancing, playing, as well as the specific recreation needs of women over 30 and other problems," he said.

It also will be the function of the committee to determine what recreational facilities are available in the community itself, and to suggest their use to Government workers, through the agency representative serving with the organization.

The concerts sponsored by The Washington Post are the kind of entertainment which fit into this program, Stalley said, and members of his group will distribute the 200 tickets to each concert The Post will give to Government employes. Each Federal representative will determine the specific method of distribution among workers in his agency.

The recreation committee, which will work in close cooperation with the Council of Personnel Administration, has invited all Government agencies in Washington to send representatives. Present at yesterday's meeting were:

Mrs. Sadie M. Babcock of the Navy Department, Miss Louise E. Monie of Agriculture, Leonard Zaciewski of the Department of Commerce, Mrs. S. L. Sherman of the Bureau of the Budget, Miss Helen Pallister of the Civil Service Commission, Mrs. Margaret Barron of the Federal Security Agency, Miss Anne L. Walker of Federal Works Agency, Joseph K. Hayes of the General Accounting Office, Miss Eulah M. Reece of the Maritime Commission, Miss Betty Thompson of the National Housing Agency, Mrs. Elizabeth Gleb of the Office of Censorship, Miss Ida May Flickinger of the Office of the Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs, Miss Ruth Prosky of the OPA, Mr. Templeton of the Veterans' Administration, Miss Ruth Greene of War Manpower Commission, Miss Pearl Eddy of WPB, Mrs. Frances Humphrey Howard of the Office of Civilian Defense, Mrs. Harriett French of the Board of Economic Warfare, Edward A. Conover of the Office of Community War Services, Henry Hubbard of the Council of Personnel Administration, Joseph Cooper, secretary of the Employes Services Committee of the Council of Personnel Administration, and its chairman, Kenneth Warner of OPA.

De Gaulle Walks Out on Parley

Giraud, cochairmen of the committee, whose relations have fluctuated in the past eight months from cordial cooperation to determined opposition, was said to revolve around the organization of the French African army.

De Gaulle, according to reliable information, made certain proposals for the army's organization which were not acceptable to the other committee members. When no basis of compromise could be reached, De Gaulle declared himself to be in a state of "suspended resignation" until the committee accepts his proposals.

In a letter to Giraud and the French National Committee quoted by the Daily Express, De Gaulle stated that "no further useful purpose" would be served by his presence in North Africa if his suggestions for army reform are not adopted. The London paper declared that the new differences between the two committee chairmen "at this point jeopardize the work and possibly even the existence of the National Committee of Liberation."

Word leaked out in Algiers that De Gaulle refused to attend yesterday's committee meeting because of the members' attitude toward his conception of what should be done to organize the French army in Africa. Unless today's committee meeting resulted in acceptance of his proposals, it was learned, De Gaulle's "state of suspended resignation" will change to one of actual resignation.

Hopkins' Maid Robbed; Police Seize Suspect

Harry Hopkins, the President's right-hand man, telephoned the District Commissioners Tuesday about a burglary at his maid's home and the latter got service de luxe from the police.

One detective in the Ninth Precinct returned from a vacation to work with two others. They arrested one of the suspects, identified another as a fugitive from the Industrial Home School and recovered part of the loot—all within 30 hours after the robbery.

Here's the story as a Post reporter learned it at police headquarters yesterday:

Julia Mitchell, of 901 Nineteenth Street Northeast, the Hopkins' maid, returned home Monday evening to discover her apartment ransacked and $20 in bills and $2.50 in change in a church collection envelope stolen. Other apartments occupied by John H. Johnson, Samuel A. Belt and Daisy Hill, all in the same building, also had been entered.

It was a routine assignment to Ninth Precinct detectives until Tuesday when Harry Hopkins telephoned the District Commissioners. The latter communicated with Maj. Edward J. Kelly, police chief, who in turn checked with the Ninth Precinct.

Precinct Detective Nunzio Bonaccorsy was on a vacation and returned to work. Detectives George Stanton and S. B. Tillett both concentrated on the task.

They worked throughout Tuesday until 2:30 a. m. Wednesday when they arrested a 14-year-old Negro boy at his home in connection with the crime. From him they learned the identity of an alleged accomplice, a fugitive from the Industrial Home School at Blue Plains.

At the latter's home the detectives found a camera taken from the Johnson apartment and eight $25 war bonds which had been stolen from Belt's home.

Last night Detective Chief Robert J. Barrett said he intended to write a commendation to the superintendent of police in behalf of the three detectives.

Army Board to Examine Youths For Aviation Training Course

The Army Aviation Cadet Examining Board, to which is assigned the duties of examining youths for aviation training, will open offices today at 1106 New York Avenue Northwest.

Capt. Alden D. Jacobson will be in charge of the station.

The youths of 17, who are under the draft age, will be enrolled but will not be called until they reach the age of 18, it was announced.

Applicants over the age of 18 and not over 26 are required to obtain releases from their draft boards.

After the draft boards are notified that the youths over 18 have applied for service with the aviation service, the Army sends them to college for 13 months.

At college they will have preaviation training, and general academic studies. For eight months they will take training as bombardiers, navigators and pilots. After graduation they will receive commissions as second lieutenants.

under the "copper quota" program was extended and increased on a directive from the economic stabilization director.

The second was ordered about two months ago when Brown was authorized to employ the incentive payment plan in connection with the lumber industry on the West Coast.

It was learned last night that OPA is working on a possible fourth subsidy plan to be used in event the War Labor Board grants wage increases in the current coal squabble.

Vinson's order was made to implement a directive issued by Director James F. Byrnes a month ago instructing WLB to grant wage increases in excess of the "Little Steel" formula in the canning and food processing industry.

The canning industry has been particularly hard hit by the manpower shortage, with both war plants and the farms competing for its labor. Since canning work is seasonal and crops must be handled quickly, Byrnes said at the time increases were necessary to prevent crop spoilage. WLB delegated the authority for the raises to its regional boards, which now have them under consideration.

The Army's change from brass to steel for munition cases saves 1,774 pounds of brass for each 100,000 rounds of ammunition.

Tawes Admits He Violated Driving Ban

Mundy said Tawes' letter would be handed over to the panel tomorrow, for such action as it sees fit and without a hearing.

Tawes had been exonerated on Monday night by the Somerset County War Price and Rationing Board of a charge of violating the pleasure driving ban. The local board, however, did not officially inquire into the possible misuse of C ration gasoline.

Charles C. G. Evans, Tawes' attorney, submitted the statement to Mundy along with the comptroller's A ration book and tire inspection record.

"I did not learn of the renewal of the pleasure driving ban in Maryland until the evening before I was to leave Crisfield on this trip," Tawes said in his statement.

"Upon hearing of it I at once looked up the chief clerk of the local rationing board, Mr. M. B. Thawley, whom I considered to be the best informed man in Crisfield on the subject of gasoline rationing, and I asked him if he thought it would be proper for me to make the trip.

"Mr. Thawley told me that it would be, and added that if he were in my place he would take it, and on the basis of these statements I decided to do so.

"Frankly, I did not consider the kind of gasoline coupons which would be used on the trip and gave no thought to the use of C coupons being a possible violation of a possible regulation, and when Mr. Thawley approved the trip so far as pleasure driving was concerned, I thought it was all right to go."

Mundy said he would refer the case to the special panel comprised of J. William Eggleton, State rationing officer; William A. Graham, State rationing attorney; and F. Clifford Hane, assistant rationing officer.

He said the panel would probably hand down a decision.

Tawes said in his statement that the trip was slightly more than 1600 miles and required 97 gallons of gasoline.

In Annapolis Miles, who as a State official has declined use of a State car for his own use, was appointed "To act with finality in regards to the elimination of any automobiles found to be unnecessary.

"This authorization will apply to every State-owned vehicle, without exception, from our own executive department down," O'Conor said.

Preliminary Steps Planned

Miles said he had several preliminary steps in mind which he hoped to act upon over the weekend.

"The use of an automobile purchased and maintained by the State," he said, "is not an added privilege attached to the office of the official or employe to whom it may be temporarily assigned, but is, in fact, an added responsibility for which he or she is strictly accountable.

"With the country at war and citizens in every walk of life being daily subjected to many sacrifices and inconveniences, this responsibility is paramount.

"To what extent State-owned automobiles are being used unnecessarily, or for personal purposes, I do not know," Miles continued, "but it is now my job to find out as quickly as possible, and to formulate plans and policies for the elimination of all such cases and to reduce the use of such automobiles to the barest minimum possible without seriously impairing the essential interests of the State."

Miles said he would immediately undertake a survey of the needs and practices of State departments and agencies with regard to State-owned autos.

The Governor said he had advised the State OPA director, Leo McCormick, of his "contemplated action" and that McCormick had indorsed the plan.

No Conflict Anticipated

"The new arrangement will not conflict with the joint review already welcomed by me which is being undertaken by J. William Eggleston, OPA rationing officer, and Capt. Andrew T. Conner, State mileage conservation administrator.

"Mr. Miles will have the benefit of the work of the committee which was appointed by me in August, 1941, to delve into the proposal for lessened use of State cars with the consequent saving of gasoline and rubber. He will also have the benefit of the efforts of Captain Conner who has done successful work since my appointment of him six months ago."

Adding that a marked decline has been brought about through the efforts of Conner and Eggleston, O'Conor stressed the point that 114 automobiles have been eliminated by the State departments and a 20 to 25 per cent reduction in gas consumption has been noted, "representing the saving of thousands of gallons of gasoline and tens of thousands of miles of travel.

"Because of the more acute shortage (gas and rubber) now being felt I think that more automobile use may be dispensed with, which use might have been justified previously."

Navy Calls Off Deal With Standard Oil

said, received certain control rights with respect to the amount of production.

The statement issued at the Justice Department:

"Attorney General Biddle announced today that on March 26, 1943, the President had referred to him for analysis and recommendation the contract of November 20, 1942, between the Standard Oil Co. of California and the United States for the development and operation of the Elk Hills naval petroleum reserve. This action was taken by the President as the result of criticism of the contract, raising doubts as to its legality and propriety.

"The estimates for the Navy appropriations for 1944 included an item of $1,748,408.75 to cover certain expenses in connection with the contract. On the suggestion of the Attorney General, to whom the contract had been referred, the Secretary of the Navy requested the subcommittee in charge of naval appropriations for leave to withdraw this item from the appropriation for 1944 pending further recommendations by the Attorney General. The item was accordingly withdrawn.

"The Attorney General further stated that a detailed analysis of the contract has now been completed and that, after further study, he expects to submit his recommendations to the President at an early date."

Post Story Brings Back Paul Smith (The Dog) to Lyon

The mother of a small boy saw that the description of a lost dog in a Post story tallied with one her young son had just brought home, and the return of George H. Lyon's scottie-spaniel puppy resulted last night. Mr. Lyon is chief of the OWI news bureau and the dog is named "Paul Smith," for his predecessor in that post.

The dog, missing since Tuesday morning, was found by Johnny Dewhurst, 5, of 5342 Thirty-second Street Northwest. He took it home, bathed and fed it, and decided it would make an excellent pet. But his mother, Mrs. Howard H. Dewhurst soon saw that the dog was the hero of the Post story, and verified its ownership by calling Mrs. Lyon.

Fan Mail Deluges Crusading Editor

Special Dispatch to The Post

Princess Anne, Md., June 11. Rives Matthews, "one-horse fighting editor of Maryland," has been flooded with mail and telephone calls since he was charged with criminal libel—and a sizable percentage of his backers, he declares, are servicemen who cheer on his "courageous expose" of State Comptroller J. Millard Tawes' pleasure trip to Georgia.

In answer to State's Attorney Prentiss W. Evans' assertion that he is being prosecuted on a malicious slander charge partly because the attacks in the Somerset News upon State officials were "disturbing to the morale of men in uniform," Matthews produced his fan mail as proof that the armed forces are on his side.

"I'm really glad that some one has the guts to go after the high and mighty officials luxuriating in State-owned cars," wrote one enlisted man.

"If there were more energetic, fearless citizens like you, we could keep this country in pretty decent shape," said a soldier in Georgia. "Accept my congratulations and best wishes for long continuance of this action on your part."

Many letters include cash, checks and money orders to enable Matthews to carry on his legal fight, he told a Post reporter tonight, and he has received approximately $200 in this manner.

"I understand that the American Newspaper Publishers Association, which met in New York today, offered its counsel and that Elisha Hanson of Washington is to extend all legal aid," Matthews declared.

Concerning the cancellation of Tawes' hearing, the editor was as boiling mad as his editorials.

"This thing has go e too far to be passed up and suspended," he scoffed. "Just look at the regulations in your own gas ration book; they say: 'Persons who do not observe the gasoline rationing rules and regulations may be punished by as much as 10 years' imprisonment or $10,000 fine or both, and are subject to such other penalties prescribed by law.'"

For the four weeks ended June 5 local store sales showed a gain of 19 per cent, compared with an increase of 23 per cent in the Fifth district.

Power Output Up 14.5%

Will Redeem Part of Debt

Directors of the North American Co. yesterday voted to redeem $1,500,000 additional of the company's 3¾ per cent debentures due 1954 on July 15 at the redemption price of 102.

This retirement, plus $338,000 of debentures which will be retired August 1 through the utility holding company's sinking fund, will reduce the outstanding issue to $34,150,000 from the original amount of 70 million dollars. Redemption of more than 50 per cent of the issue has been effected since April, 1941.

Western Union Gross Higher But Net Drops

New York, June 11 (AP).—Albert N. Williams, president of the Western Union Telegraph Co., said today telegraph and cable revenues were running substantially ahead of last year due to the war traffic, which more than offset business lost from the discontinuance of greeting messages on such special occasions as Easter.

Reporting four months net income of $2,001,248, equal to $1.91 a capital share, compared with $2,047,686, or $1.96, a year ago. Williams explained the slight decline in net as due to larger expenses involved in training new workers, higher taxes and increased depreciation charges.

Newsprint Output Slumps

New York, June 11 (AP).—The Newsprint Service Bureau reported today aggregate production of newsprint in North America during the first five months of this year was 18.1 per cent below that of the comparable 1942 period, a decrease of 354,232 tons.

Roosevelt to Let Congress Develop Next Tax Program

By Edward Ryan
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt said yesterday that details of the next tax program would be up to Congress, but warned that a sales tax might have to be passed over his veto.

He told his press conference that he might send a message to Congress, but that if he did it would deal with the whole broad problem of the inflation and consumer purchasing power without being limited to the tax question or going into much detail.

The President told a reporter that he was getting into deep water by asking about a proposed 35 to 40 per cent withholding levy understood to have been discussed the day before during a conference of the Administration's top economic officials, War Mobilizer Byrnes, Stabilization Director Vinson, Budget Director Smith, and Randolph Paul, the Treasury's top tax expert.

The President did not repudiate the proposal.

Mr. Roosevelt took special care to correct an impression that he was prepared to recommend to Congress an anti-inflation revenue-raising program based on more taxes and compulsory savings.

In mentioning such a program Tuesday, Mr. Roosevelt said yesterday, he was only talking tax theory, and he said he was sorry that the impression had been given that he would definitely ask for a program including compulsory savings.

What he had said, the President declared referring to the transcript of the earlier conference, was that a program featuring compulsory savings could be used jointly, but not that they would be used jointly, to combat inflation.

At that point he observed that Congress could pass a sales tax, but that it might have to do so over his veto.

The route of the President's tax discussion gave ample indication that the Treasury and Secretary Morgenthau were more than holding their own in an apparent battle for the decisive Administration word in tax matters. Secretary Morgenthau kept engagements in New York, to discuss the war bond sales program with bankers, rather than attend the Byrnes conference. The Treasury has consistently fought shy of the compulsory savings idea, for fear that it would upset the voluntary bond sales.

Mr. Roosevelt said flatly that he does not now intend to ask Congress to legislate compulsory savings. The continued success of the voluntary bond-sales program, he said, will determine whether compulsory savings are sought. A reporter pointed out that the President's budget message of January had called for a program of taxes and savings to raise an additional 16 billion in revenue, and he asked whether the President thought it was possible to legislate a program of voluntarism. It was perfectly possible, the President said.

The President was asked about the 16 billion dollar estimate of the inflationary gap between consumer purchasing power and available consumer goods, and he said that the gap may have widened somewhat since his budget message went to Congress. As a result, he indicated that the anti-inflation, tax and savings program may be aimed at a cash goal larger than 16 billion dollars. He said that he wanted to see the inflationary gap closed up as quickly as possible.

Congressional leaders have made clear that no start was likely to be made at writing another tax bill for several months, and that with the new pay-as-you-go system going into effect July 1, no future tax increases would be put into effect before next January 1.

Victory Tax Collection Far Exceeds Estimate

Victory tax collections from January 1 through June 5 totaled $682,382,523.20, or $147,782,523.20 more than the $534,600,000 the Treasury had estimated it would get, Commissioner of Internal Revenue Helvering said yesterday.

After July 1, the Victory tax collections will be absorbed in part by the new 20 per cent pay-as-you-go levy on the taxable part of payrolls.

House Passes Antistrike Bill By219-129Vote

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Legislation rigidly binding labor to its wartime "no strike" agreement yesterday finally cleared the House, 219 to 129, and reached the brink of Senate passage.

Before dusk tonight the watertight antistrike measure should be on the President's desk. Leaders predicted, almost without qualification, that he will sign it.

An unusual Saturday session was called by the Senate in order to present the Administration this week with the powerful cudgel against resumption of the mine strike and far reaching restrictions on walkouts in any war plant.

A conference oversight threatened for a time to endanger the President's "hold the line" order and other stabilization directives but eleventh hour interpretations of the measure's scope apparently satisfied the Administration.

Power for President

Inadvertently omitted from the conference draft was a provision giving statutory force to presidential regulations, notably the authority of the Stabilization Director to review War Labor Board decisions.

Managers of the bill took the floor in both Houses to explain that another phrase in the bill, requiring the board to conform to all "applicable provisions of law" would have the same effect.

It had been broadly hinted in some well-informed quarters that the legislation might collide with a veto unless this point was cleared up.

Early in the day the bill sped through the House after a single hour's debate, but was held up in the Senate by a pending farm measure. Near the adjournment hour it was called up by Senator Connally (Democrat) of Texas too late for final action.

In the House there was a brisk round of opposition. Representative Fogarty (Democrat) of Rhode Island called it a "stab in the back of labor."

Representative Marcantonio (American Labor), New York, shouted, "Labor is being pilloried and lynched."

But the bulk of Democratic and Republican support swung behind it, bringing passage by about the same margin as the original Harness-Smith version. Voting "Aye" were 101 Democrats and 118 Republicans. Forty-eight Republicans joined 77 Democrats and 4 minor party members in opposition.

Labor Precedent Set

It was the first time during this Administration that a bill solidly opposed by all labor groups had reached the brink of enactment and many thought reflected the rising influence in politics as well as legislation of the expanding potential soldier vote.

Under attack by House opponents was a provision requiring the WLB to conform to the provisions of the National Labor Relations Act. Marcantonio insisted this would stop the WLB from issuing further closed shop or maintenance of union orders, Representative Smith (Democrat) of Virginia, who originally inserted it in the House bill, did not dispute the point. But he denied this was an innovation in law, pointing to a similar provision in the executive order setting up the board.

Representative May (Democrat) of Kentucky, in charge of the bill, denied there was anything in the measure to give offense to labor. Representative Harness (Republican) of Indiana, whose substitute measure was originally approved by the House, called the completed bill "the most effective solution that could be reached under the circumstances."

Heart center of the bill is a flat ban on any strike in any Government-held war plant. Leaders of a strike in such a plant would be punished by fines up to $5000 and a one-year jail sentence. Workers in private war plants would be required to give 30 days' notice of strike, stay at work during that period, and then submit to a secret strike ballot by the NLRB.

Ala. Publisher To Appeal Fine And Jail Term

By the Associated Press

Mobile, Ala., June 11.—Ralph B. Chandler, publisher of the Mobile Press and Register, fined $10 and sentenced to six hours in jail for editorial criticism of a criminal court judge, declared today he would appeal "all the way to the United States Supreme Court, if necessary, to protect the constitutional freedom of the press." Judge Tisdale J. Touart of Inferior Criminal Court took exception to the Register's editorial suggestion that a $2000 peace bond, assessed against a man charged with complicity in recent racial disorders at a Mobile shipyard, was "a toss-up between conviction and acquittal."

Judge Touart, sentencing Chandler for contempt, said the editorial charge was "absolutely untrue."

White House Gets $6,273,629,000 Lend-Lease Bill

The Senate completed congressional action yesterday on legislation appropriating $6,273,629,000 for lend-lease operations in the next fiscal year, with the stipulation that none of the funds be spent for subsidies on agricultural products grown in this country.

The bill, which now goes to the White House, would finance the mutual aid program by which this country has undertaken to supply its Allies with munitions, ships, food and other war materials.

Of the proposed outlay, $4,452,623,000 would go for the purchase of food with $1,552,659,000 allocated for shipping and supplies.

Pantelleria

To achieve the conquest of Pantelleria, the Italian island which lies almost equidistant between Sicily and Tunisia, the Allies did not find it necessary to risk a single soldier or land a single man. From beginning to end the Pantelleria campaign was predominantly—indeed overwhelmingly—an air show. It is true that in the last stage Allied warships supplemented the bombing of Pantelleria from the air by shelling the island from the sea and that sea power enabled the Allies to cut the Axis supply line to the beleaguered island. But granted that sea power hastened the outcome, as it probably did, the victory, nevertheless, was one for air power.

This is the first time in history that a strongly entrenched garrison has surrendered to air power. It did so because, in the first place, it lacked the capacity to fight back in the air and because the weight of bombs dropped on it day after day destroyed its capacity to resist. There emerged, therefore, from the Pantelleria campaign a new pattern of conquest, one in which the emphasis is on strategic bombing on a scale and with an intensity never witnessed before. We must not assume, nor should we expect, that henceforth the Allies will rely on air power alone to achieve victory over the Axis. What was true of Pantelleria may not be equally true of other Allied objectives. But there is no doubt that air power will now be used more than ever by the United Nations to soften up the enemy for invasion so that, if he does not crack in the meantime, the task for the invading troops will be made easy. Pantelleria shows the way.

Saving OPA

Congressional critics of OPA policies have issued timely warnings against pressing the attack on that agency so relentlessly as to bring about its complete collapse. However much they may disapprove of the things that OPA has done or failed to do, these critics realize that it is the one agency that stands guard against price chaos. To be sure, the OPA has not protected consumers against sharp advances in living costs. That is partly because of inefficient enforcement methods, but principally because of the defects of the system of price control which it has tried to administer. It was a foregone conclusion that, barring a reformation of the methods followed in trying to stabilize prices, the OPA would eventually fall into disrepute. The process of disintegration following loss of reputation is already far advanced, and unless quick remedial action is taken, the country may find itself left to the tender mercies of a completely unregulated market. The prospect is one that causes even Representative Patman to shudder: "Once your controls were gone, he warns, a dollar wouldn't be worth 50 cents." We venture to say that at no distant date a dollar would be worth a good deal less than 50 cents if people with billions of unspent cash were free to bid up prices of essential goods at will and permitted to buy as much as they could get of the necessities of life.

After reflecting on the possible consequences of a return to laissez faire, the average citizen would probably admit that the OPA has done a great deal to protect him from the ravages of inflation, even though it has fallen far short of expectations. Obviously the organization needs to be strengthened from within and without to enable it to do a better job. Depriving the OPA of needed funds and shifting its functions to other agencies would only make a bad situation worse.

Food Dilemma

In his address to the American Farm Bureau Federation, Mr. Hoover pointed out that in the seven years, between the harvests of 1932 and 1939, 47 million acres of land were withdrawn from the production of 17 leading crops, while only 9 million acres of that total had been returned to cultivation by 1942. Mr. Hoover concluded that all the withdrawn acreage must be brought back into cultivation to enable us to meet the essential food demands of the armed forces, the civilian population and our Allies. If there is no other means of averting a serious food shortage the outlook is grim, since it is altogether unlikely that we can muster the manpower and provide the machinery for the suggested acreage expansion. Shortages of farm labor and equipment are already so acute as to imperil the cultivation and harvesting of the crops now being grown. About the best that we can hope for is that the situation will not grow worse.

There is, however, an alternative method of relieving food shortages that is more practicable than Mr. Hoover's program, though it would be most unpopular. That solution would be to cut down livestock production and step up the production of cereals. Obviously it would take political courage of a high order to reverse the policies heretofore followed of encouraging increased meat production. Not only would livestock growers bitterly protest, but the American people, already feeling the pinch of meat shortages, would not take kindly to the new dispensation. Nevertheless, flocks and herds have been increased beyond our ability to feed them, as Mr. Hoover stated. We are, therefore, faced by conditions that make a temporizing policy highly dangerous.

The time has come when we must tax our productive resources to satisfy the primary food needs of ourselves and those whom we are pledged to succor. That being the case, we shall inevitably be forced to concentrate more heavily on production of those foods that yield the most nutriment for human beings in relation to the acreage under cultivation and the labor employed. In other words, we should be preparing to increase our consumption of cereals and to reduce our output of meats. If we don't, the leadership we have assumed in delivering mankind from want will be undermined, and our fair words will echo mockingly in our ears when the prostrated nations present them for redemption.

Chinese Wall

Proposals introduced in the House to give the Chinese equality with other peoples under our immigration laws have struck a dangerous snag. There appears to be a disposition to bottle them up in the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization. If this occurs, one of the bills should be brought to the floor by petition. Certainly the requisite number of signatures is available.

All that is sought by these measures is to end discrimination against the Chinese. There is no thought of opening the United States to large-scale immigration from China. There is no possibility under any of the bills introduced that more than about 100 Chinese would be granted entry into this country in any single year. The purpose is simply to do away with the antiquated, invidious and highly offensive Chinese exclusion laws, to put Chinese immigration upon a quota basis and to afford Chinese admitted to this country an opportunity for naturalization. This would do no more than bring our practice into conformity with what we preach about racial equality.

Opposition from organized labor on the ground that Chinese immigrants would threaten the American workers' standard of living are simply without foundation. The quota system makes a flood of immigration from any source impossible. If an increase in the supply of labor after the war is feared, it can be met by tightening the quotas from all countries equally. It is to the credit of the C. I. O. that this branch of labor at least has put national interest above an illusory group interest and indorsed repeal of the Chinese exclusion laws. The A. F. of L. persists in its traditional opposition.

If this opposition should prevail, it is not too much to say that both our moral and our military position would suffer a severe blow in the Far East. The Japanese have already employed our discrimination against the Chinese as a propaganda weapon against us. Their use of it would be strengthened if this discrimination were perpetuated against an ally in the midst of war. On the other hand, repeal of the Chinese exclusion laws, as Rear Admiral Yarnell, retired commander of the Asiatic Fleet, recently testified, would have an effect in the Far East similar to the effect in the Western democracies of Stalin's dissolution of the Comintern. It would tell China and the world that the war aims of the United Nations are genuine.

Fining Strikers

Apparently Secretary Ickes ordered the collection of fines from the soft-coal miners who went out on strike last week as a means of forcing them to think twice before walking out again at the end of the present period of grace fixed by John L. Lewis. That is unquestionably a worthy objective. But the order may be more conducive to renewal of the strike than to continued production of coal. At the moment it looks very much as if the Solid Fuels Administrator has unnecessarily employed a two-edged sword.

No doubt there will be widespread sympathy with Mr. Ickes' action because the public is disgusted with the sabotage tactics that John L. Lewis is pursuing. But it would scarcely be argued that the miners should be fined merely to satisfy public opinion. If Mr. Ickes planned to make the fines provided in the old contract between the operators and miners an effective deterrent to unauthorized strikes, he should have applied them to the first coal strike six weeks ago. Having waived the collection of fines then, Secretary Ickes raised a natural presumption that they would be waived again. So in spite of the WLB order of May 25 extending the old contract between miners and operators, Mr. Ickes' intention of collecting fines from the strikers seems to have come as a surprise to them. There is the additional fact that fines provided by a contract between private employers and their employes are not a proper penalty for defiance of the Government.

The miners base their denunciation of the order chiefly upon their contention that no contract was in force when they walked out. But that is only another phase of their argument that the WLB has no authority to enforce the Administration's policy of settling wage disputes. Presumably that argument will soon be rendered academic by enactment of the Connally-Smith bill. More immediate is the question of whether fines of this kind can serve any really useful purpose in settling this controversy. The important objective is to keep the mines operating at full capacity and not to penalize past indiscretion. We suspect that if the miners accept the forthcoming decision of the WLB and remain continuously on the job, an agreement to refund the fines can easily be worked out, as Mr. Ickes indicated yesterday in pointing out that the contracts provide for negotiations on any dispute over such fines.

Glorious Ship

Glory is something that attaches itself not merely to persons but as often to abstract entities like regiments and armies or to seemingly inanimate creatures like ships. Of this almost every war affords instances and the latest and possibly greatest instance of the present war is the U. S. S. Enterprise. The names of her crew are unknown to us and perhaps are destined to obscurity, but the Enterprise herself will never be forgotten. As a fighting unit this aircraft carrier has sunk 17 Japanese ships unaided, has helped to sink 10 others, has damaged more than a dozen, and has destroyed at least 185 Japanese aircraft, 63 of them in a single day's fighting. Among other things she had a part in the great Tokyo raid.

Of course, the Enterprise had a name to live up to, for she is the fifth American naval vessel of this designation. There was an Enterprise in the Revolution, another in the War of 1812, yet another commanded by Decatur in the famous Tripolitanian campaign. It is curious, indeed, how ships much more than men are predestined to glory by their names. Another instance, of course, is the carrier Wasp, which perished off Guadalcanal a few months after all her magnificent exploits on the Malta convoy run. The British navy, too, can offer instances of this predestination by name, and one of them is certainly H. M. S. Penelope which, to the best of our knowledge, is still afloat and fighting after all her incredible ordeals and adventures.

It is something of a question whether officers and sailors do not find a greater satisfaction in the glory that accrues to their ship than in any that may attach to their personal exploits. In one sense, of course, all who serve aboard a glorious ship partake of her glory. But in another sense her glory must seem to them all the greater for being above and apart from them, as the glory of a nation is above and apart from the patriot or the glory of God above and apart from the saint.

Practical Men

The plaint most commonly leveled at the Administration by its critics is that it employs theorists and academicians to do the work of practical men. The title "professor" has been made a taunt. It has entered frequently into the recent acerbities at OPA. New Deal economists have been derided because they "never met a payroll." New Deal lawyers have been lampooned because they lacked court experience. And now Walter Wanger of Hollywood takes OWI to task because its Motion Picture Bureau is peopled by men who never made a movie.

Writing in the spring issue of The Public Opinion Quarterly, Mr. Wanger let go with both barrels. The OWI, he declared, "has entrusted the full sweep of war power, and the intangible but strong leverage of the desire the producer shares with all citizens to be a patriot, to gentlemen with no previous film experience. An inevitable result is that producers are continually urged, under pressure, to make so-called propaganda pictures that can effect no purpose except to empty theaters." A better method, in Mr. Wanger's judgment, would be for the Government to suggest only the broadest indication of policy and leave the execution of it exclusively in the hands of topflight Hollywood executives.

Having made this suggestion, Mr. Wanger then added that "To realistic, working machinery in OWI like the officials suggested above, the industry would welcome the addition of a board of theoretical psychologists of proved expertness." And he proceeded to name seven individuals, all but one of whom are academicians. Certainly they have an important place in our war effort—a place too often and too carelessly disparaged by the thoughtless. Motion picture producers are not versed in psychology. Nor are businessmen necessarily familiar with the theories of economics. Theory has its very considerable uses in the approach to large national problems. It is, after all, merely a distillation of experience. Perhaps a judicious blending of theoretical and practical backgrounds affords the best formula for meeting the Government's enormously complex job.

PLUM TREE IN MAY

Now in the claw
Of the dooryard plum
A low-hanging cloud
Is caught. O come
And see the white
Florescent song
Before the wind
Shall come along,
Before the ground
Shall be a shroud
And time, the flower,
The wayside cloud
Caught in the breast,
Shall be released.
O come before
We too are fleeced.

Argentine Upset

AS THE DUST of the Argentine military revolt settles a bit, the only thing entirely clear is that the Argentine enigma definitely is not solved. Rather the reverse. The question that had hung over that country ever since the Rio conference is now deeper than ever.

First news of the army revolt went out to the world accompanied by a statement that the revolting forces were deposing Castillo because he had ignored public opinion and had not lived up to inter-American obligations. It was naturally assumed throughout the hemisphere that this was the break that would lead to a government in accord with Argentine popular will for inter-American cooperation. The enemy also assumed this and began at once to beat propaganda drums about the "United States-sponsored revolt."

But subsequent events have brought second thoughts. The first cabinet, General Rawson's, had at least two men of known pro-Nazi sympathies. General Ramirez, succeeding Rawson, put out these elements, but his government is pure conservatism.

The new President has announced that he will honor inter-American obligations with "acts." But at the same time it has been given out that Argentina will remain "neutral for the present." The Argentine Congress has been dismissed and nothing has been said about the presidential elections due to be held this fall.

Lend-Lease Equipment

Meanwhile, comment in the United States has boiled reasons for the coup down to army dissatisfaction because Castillo's policy kept them from getting lend-lease equipment and we have grown less optimistic. Berlin and Rome, on the other hand, have taken heart and are saying that if we expect a change in foreign policy, we'll be disappointed.

Now if the Argentine coup was indeed motivated by army dissatisfaction over not getting equipment, how do they expect to better themselves if they come only halfway into the inter-American effort against the Axis? Both Brazil and Mexico are getting ready to send troops overseas. All the Middle American republics and Bolivia have declared war, and Colombia is backing the idea of a unanimous declaration by the rest. Does the new Argentine government expect to get full benefits from inter-American cooperation while herself giving half measures?

And if the new government is not going beyond "neutrality," which would make its situation on equipment unchanged, what then could have been the real purpose of the coup?

It could have been this: To prevent a stroke that would have put the pro-democratic Argentine people at last in control of their government. This would make the move a counterrevolution in advance of a people's revolt.

Recent rumors that a pro-democratic move of some kind was in the wind in Argentina lend strength to this possibility. Chilean newspapers have pointed out that the army move shows that a "deplorable state of subversive activity" was on. A Rio paper, La Vanguarda, said Tuesday that the army realized the people's desperation was carrying Argentine toward civil disorder.

Opposition Parties

But whether a blow was planned or not, pro-democratic opposition to Castillo's plan to steamroller a successor into office was growing. The Radicals and Socialists, strongest opposition parties, were at last getting together for a vigorous election campaign.

More important still, opposition from within conservative ranks was growing formidable. Rodolfo Moreno, governor of the powerful Buenos Aires Province, had openly condemned Castillo's policies. Many prominent figures of Argentine conservatism were in open rebellion. The Castillo clique was being deserted by their civilian support. This left them only the army, which they courted assiduously.

Observers had recently begun to say that while Castillo evidently intended to use election fraud to put in the man of his choice, Patron Costas, the growing power of public opinion would in all probability eventually force a change on the latter. It was pointed out that Patron Costas, while not pro-American, was friendly toward the British. It was also underlined that he did not like Ruiz Guinazu, Castillo's Foreign Minister and a strong isolationist.

It may be, of course, that, no matter what their motive for seizing power was, the army group will accede to the popular pressure for a pro-United Nations foreign policy. The new President is known to be in contact with radical leaders.

Only time can tell what the new regime's real intentions are. Speculation about them throughout the hemisphere has been frank. Official expressions are reserved, but unofficial comment is searching. Whatever the new Argentine regime may do about domestic matters, the chance that they will be able to get away with bluffing on inter-American cooperation for selfish purposes appears very slim.

Triumphant Test

The Capture Of Pantelleria

THE CAPTURE of Pantelleria was for so long anticipated that the actual event came as something of an anticlimax. Just the same, this latest Allied victory is of first-rate importance.

It is important because it removes an obstacle that stood in the way of the free movement of Allied shipping in the Mediterranean. It is important because Pantelleria is the first bit of actual Italian soil to fall into Allied hands.

Most important of all is the fact that the fall of Pantelleria was engineered by a combination of air and sea power alone. The invasion, when it came, consisted merely of the moving in of an Allied occupying force following the hoisting of the white flag by the enemy garrison.

THIS IS the first time such a development has occurred in this war. It will not be the last. The method employed to overcome enemy resistance on Pantelleria is peculiarly suitable for operations elsewhere in the Mediterranean. And it may play an important part as well in the coming Battle of Europe.

In the Battle of Crete, where air power won its greatest tactical victory up to that time, the Nazis used planes as a substitute for ships. They used transports and gliders to invade the island from the air as well as bombers to weaken the ground defenses and fighters to destroy the defending Allied air force.

The fact remains that Crete was invaded before it was captured. The final struggle occurred on land.

A SOMEWHAT similar situation, with the roles fortunately reversed, occurred later in the New Guinea theater, in the struggle for Buna and Gona.

There, except for a small Australian force that had moved overland from Port Moresby across the Owen Stanley Mountain Range, the ground troops were transported by air and all Allied troops were supplied by air. But important as air power was in that struggle, the victory was won not by air power alone but by a combination of aviation and infantry.

At Guadalcanal, on the other hand, the victorious combination consisted of sea, air and land forces. At Attu the enemy was overcome by land troops backed up by naval strength. Only at Pantelleria was a battle won, an objective taken, without the employment of any ground troops, by air and sea power alone.

PANTELLERIA is a tiny island; Sicily is many times its size, and Europe is vastly greater than Sicily.

Nonetheless, what happened at Pantelleria was the triumphant test of a method which, however modified to conform to local situations, is applicable to these other theaters.

The point is that Sicily consists of a collection of Pantellerias and Europe is only a collection of Sicilies. What happened at Pantelleria can, to a greater or lesser degree, be made to happen again.

Pantelleria's shore defenses—Mussolini once boastfully described it as an Italian Gibraltar—were not less formidable than those to be found at any point in Sicily or, with few exceptions, at any point along the coastal rim of Fortress Europe.

PANTELLERIA'S fortifications did not, however, enable its garrison to hold out indefinitely. In the first place, constant pounding by air made unusable the only air field on the island. The only air protection the Pantelleria garrison received during the last weeks was that based on Sicily and that air cover was neither sufficiently adequate or efficient to prevent Allied bombers from getting through to their targets.

Secondly, Allied sea power made it impossible for the Axis to reinforce or supply the Pantelleria garrison despite the fact that only a narrow gap of some 60 miles separates Sicily from Pantelleria. And this sea blockade was made watertight through the addition of an air blockade. Unchallenged sea power also made it possible for the Allies to shell Pantelleria's coastal defenses as well as bomb it from the air.

The garrison at Pantelleria held out as long as it could. By rejecting two Allied demands for surrender, Italian amour propre was satisfied. The troops on the island held out as long as it was humanly possible. They could not and did not hold out indefinitely.

The combination of air and sea power that won at Pantelleria has already been at work in the case of Sicily and will now be intensified. The combination this time may not be quite enough. The use of ground troops as well as of air and sea power may be found necessary to put the finishing touches to the conquest of the larger island. But the main job of beating the Axis in Sicily will probably be done by Allied air and sea power with the ground troops saved for the final mopping up. Similar tactics could then be employed against selected points on the Italian mainland. Certainly for Italy, and to a very real extent for Germany, too, Pantelleria is the writing on the wall.

Car Sharing

I note your editorial in The Post entitled "In Wartime, Too."

Did the elderly woman indicate an offer of a ride would be acceptable? Were not the majority of the drivers she mentions men? The average woman on the street corner does not accept and generally resents, as drivers know, if a car stops.

Also a big deterring factor is that insurance companies do not cover such passengers in automobile policies and the average driver is of the opinion that if an accident, or incident, occurs that they will be held financially liable. THOMAS A. ALDRICH.

Editor's note: If passengers are injured the car owner is protected, under his liability insurance policy, only if it can be proved that the accident was due to his negligence.

Poll Tax

The poll tax usually amounts to $1 or $2 per year. That will not keep anyone from voting who really wants to vote. Anyone who is unwilling to pay that much for the opportunity to vote is evidently not much interested in voting, and anyone who is unable or unwilling to contribute that much to the support of his government is not a very useful citizen and hardly deserves the right to vote.

Citizenship carries with it certain duties and responsibilities, as well as benefits and privileges. But too many people in recent years have been emphasizing only the benefits of citizenship and ignoring the duties and responsibilities. I would favor a minimum tax for everybody, and I would make it higher than the usual poll tax. We already have too many people exercising the voting privilege who have never in their lives paid one cent of direct tax toward the support of their Government (and this applies especially to the Federal Government), people who have been using, or abusing, their voting power to vote themselves various benefits out of the public treasury, but who bellow like bay steers when it is proposed to levy any tax on them for the support of that treasury. If that is democracy, then democracy is a racket and a fraud, and is doomed to failure.

Japanese Propaganda

It is unfortunate that the laws of a few States provide propaganda for the Japanese to prove that this is not a democratic country, but rather a collection of independent States, some democratic and some with laws that are as oppressive to minorities as the ghetto laws of Hitler's Germany or the laws Mussolini operated under in Italy or Africa. Japan has taken a leaf from our book to apply in the Philippines and controlled territories, only here the segregated group is a noncolored minority.

If we had the strength to liberalize our laws and policies in some of our States it would be worth many millions spent by the OWI as counterpropaganda against the Japanese claims.

Stranded Suburbs

Why must many outlying areas be left with no bus service at all? Literally stranded and helpless. Why cannot hourly or even every other hour service be given through the day instead of the former 15-minute service instead of stopping all daily service in such suburbs as Kenwood, etc.

We are not asking for even 50 per cent of our old service; just not to cut us off entirely. I sat in Dupont Circle this noon and counted the P Street buses. They ran every four or five minutes, two-thirds empty, as often as they used to, while the suburbs are cut off completely. Transfer just one of those an hour to Kenwood and let us be able to get into town or to the doctor or grocer when absolutely necessary. M. K.

Revival

A revival of church-going alone will not save this world now. Anybody can merely go to church. Better than this would be for people to substitute God for God in place of Man for God. To worship men as leaders, is cause of war. To revive worship of God for God is cure of war. God is love. What man and the church do to bring a practical world peace plan to birth is the revival. To work for construction and for just action for this whole world is the only true bravery.

Double-Talk Of Officialdom

We are checking on this: Letter handed to new girl for filing in wrong cabinet.

Letter received and contents noted: We skimmed through the first paragraph.

Thanks for calling the matter to our attention: Where do you get the idea we have time to listen to such squawks?

Your interest is deeply appreciated: But not to the point where we could bother to read your letter carefully.

Teen-Age Advice

It is pretty hard to guess the exact requirements of the service in '44 and '45. Much will depend on the fortunes of war. But it is certain that we will need most of all leaders, men who can think and do, men with poise and experience and the knowledge of doing.

The service doesn't want a certain number of years of algebra, semesters of solid geometry, cadet commissions. It wants men, men who can walk up to any job from bucking a heavy truck up a hill to writing a text, and make a good stab at it. And the service doesn't want these men in '44 and '45, it wants them yesterday!

Men grow and learn and gain ability from everything they do—from studying in high school and college, studying math and physics and English and all—and from living, taking out Sea Scout cruises, holding cadet commissions, going away from home to school. Both kinds of experience are essential, the second no less than the first.

So it's up to each man to lay out his schedule so as to get both school training and experience, to get as much of both as possible, and to get them fast. If he goes to school this summer, he will get more technical training, sooner. He will also make it possible to put in a year away from home, on his own. On both counts he makes important gains.

But if he goes to school this summer he will lose out on at least one cruise and on a cadet commission. These are the losses, and they are distinct losses. Remember in deciding that the biggest maturing factor in a man's life is his first year away from home. Remember also to get sufficient work in high school to be eligible for any good college.

Re-Educating The Germans

VICE PRESIDENT WALLACE wants to re-educate the addled Nazi-brains through imported educators in order to integrate postwar Germany into a peaceful democratic world of our liking. Such an idea could only originate in an era topheavy with overemphasis upon the intellect. Moreover, it is an idea of almost Germanic coinage, though of pre-Nazi stamp. For it seems that in the eyes of all other peoples eighty million Germans cannot be wrong without an underlying philosophy. It should therefore be easy to make them see the light by a correction of their mental vision through education. Being of malleable and docile mind, they are expected to accept this kind of violence applied from abroad. However, educational invasion operating under protection of an occupation army might easily retard instead of accelerating, the process of autonomous reorientation.

The suggested procedure is unprecedented in history. Often, indeed, the vanquished have exercised spiritual influence upon the victors. The proponents of re-education have no qualms as to the practical feasibility, the number of qualified teachers required, the linguistic difficulties, the lack of mental ties between teachers and pupils—indispensable in any mental communion—and, first and foremost, the spirit and doctrine which should be introduced in substitution of Nazi education. But it is easy to say that we must teach the Germans the principles of humanity and democracy. But have these principles ever and anywhere been taught in any universal code and would such a code, even if it could be abstrated, be applicable to the German people in its historically conditioned learnings and mentalities? Do you know what the German people is to be re-educated for? Everywhere—this country not excluded—the values to be maintained in general education are being hotly discussed. Curricula of social and political sciences are particularly contested, affected as they are by the dynamics of social and political events. All nations, after this war, will continue groping for the line of demarcation between the rights of the individual and the claims of social life. Emphasis upon one or the other in each nation will be differently determined by different historical developments. Uniformity, were it even desirable, is not to be expected.

Nazism Rootless

The hasty and violent infiltration of Nazism, deleterious as it was for a whole generation, is still rootless, and may be expected to go with the hot wind of boastful propaganda.

"Incentives of democratic education"—to this modest size Vice President Wallace has reduced the overambitious Utopia of exported education—should measure the chances of lasting success on a few examples selected at random from the educational and political history of Germany. During all of the nineteenth and twentieth centuries the political and moral education in the school of pre-Nazi Germany was built upon Christian religion, military virtues, including chivalry, classic philosophy and Kantian ethics. Through this education went the minds of the generations, who nevertheless followed the Swastika, not only as spineless fellow travelers, but as Hitler's jailers, torturers and hangmen.

One might object that this example is unconvincing because the seed of education had been overridden by the catastrophes of the World War and its aftermath. So let us think of another example. The most prominent freethinkers and democrats of 1848 and the leaders of the short-lived liberal period in Germany and in Austria in the sixties and seventies were educated in monasteries by pious friars and priests. These men, in their turn, urged and achieved secularization of the educational system and introduced an excellent curriculum inspired by advanced liberal and humanistic principles. But the generations prepared for civic life under this ideal program were unable to prevent the decay of liberalism, they embraced the creeds of socialism or supported actively the most rabid racial and social reaction known in central Europe before Hitler, in spite of the fact that their scholarly equipment did not contain incentives of socialistic or reactionary education.

Caution Indicated

Caution would thus seem to be indicated in the attemps to educate the German people "from abroad." The problem remains, whether or not the German way of education should and could be influenced, where it creates dangers for the peaceful order of international relations. As in many other fields, the unprecedented onslaught of Naziism against the world may justify innovations in international law, directed against dangerous theories and practices, if enforced by methodical education.

It should be possible, under international law, to provide against deliberate indoctrination of national hatred and against methodical falsification of historical facts and documentary evidence in officially prescribed or tolerated textbooks.

Finally there is an enforceable corrective in minorities. The safeguarding of minorities ought to be the first condition of any sovereignty. Germany reasserted herself after the destruction of the Thirty Years War in the family of nations through the unique achievement of a classical century. In expiation of Hitlerism she owes the world another century of like achievements. But she herself has to find the arduous ways of education and national exertions leading to this goal. No other nation could assume this task for her.

Flood Control On Potomac

Randolph Testifies

A demand that the Potomac River Basin from the river's headwaters to the National Capital be included in any Nation-wide postwar program of flood control projects was presented to the House Flood Control Committee yesterday by Representatives Randolph (Democrat) of West Virginia, and Beall (Republican) of Maryland.

Randolph, testifying both for himself and for Representative Beall, who is also a member of the Flood Committee, recommended that the first move in the Potomac region after the war should be completion of the Savage River flood control dam.

He estimated that the dam, 25 miles west of Cumberland, Md., had been more than 50 per cent completed before the war put a stop to the work. Beall gave a higher estimate of the amount that had been finished, saying that it might run as much as 80 per cent, but he agreed that when finished it would have major importance in the river development.

Flood Might Destroy Work

Randolph explained that there was danger that if the Savage River project were left unfinished a very heavy flood might destroy much of the work that had already been done. About $600,000 had been spent on the project to date, he estimated.

The Flood Committee's hearings which have been going on for the past two weeks were called by Chairman Whittington (Democrat) of Tennessee, with the idea of working out a catalogue of flood control projects for the postwar period.

Randolph and Beall disclosed that engineers of the War Department is surveying the Potomac River area, and that a report on likely projects and on the flood of last fall which caused extensive damage above Washington would be ready about November 15, and would probably be sent to Congress.

Randolph said that the surveyors have studied the possibility of dikes, walls and diversion canals all along the Potomac and its tributary rivers.

Towns Affected

In a letter which the two members presented to the committee, they pointed out that the following communities were affected besides Washington:

In Maryland: Luke, Westernport, McCoole, Seibert, Spring Gap, Pinto, Kitzmiller, Oldtown, Steyer, Cumberland, Hancock, Little Orleans, Williamsport, Point of Rocks, Brunswick, Knoxville, Weverton, Dickerson and Cabin John.

In West Virginia: Piedmont, Keyser, Ridgeley, Wiley Ford, Green Spring, Paw Paw, Magnolia, Orleans Cross Roads, Great Cacapon, Harpers Ferry, Romney and Moorefield.

"We desire to call attention to the fact that any plans of a post-war nature will vitally affect this entire territory reaching from the upper Potomac Watershed to the National Capital," their letter said. "Millions of dollars are invested in industrial properties in this region."

Randolph and Beall said that ordnance facilities were among the industrial plants flanking the river in the area in and around Cumberland, Md., and Keyser, W. Va.

The Gallup Poll

Nearly 20 Million V-Gardens Will Help Alleviate Vegetable Shortages in Nation

By George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., June 11.—As a result of the victory garden campaign, about four million families in New England and Middle Atlantic States have planted vegetable gardens this year. This represents an increase in these States of about 500,000 over last year.

Throughout the entire country, according to a recently completed institute survey, approximately 3,300,000 more gardens are being grown this year than last year. This brings the total number of victory gardens actually under cultivation to very nearly 20 million, the goal of the victory garden campaign.

The survey also discloses that a surprisingly large number of "garden" farmers actually carried out their intentions of planting plots—testimony to the effectiveness of the thousands of community garden drives. In April the institute found that about 21 million families said they planned to grow their own vegetables. Nearly 20 million actually planted gardens. Thus relatively few reneged. And to be weighed against this is the fact that in the latest survey about two million still say they intend to plant.

Size of Plots

The average size of the garden plot, on the basis of gardeners' plans at the start of the season is approximately 500 square feet in cities of 100,000 or more population—a plot of about 20 by 25 feet. In towns or cities of less than 100,000 down to and including rural non-farm areas, gardens were expected to average 40 by 95 feet or 3800 square feet. Gardens on farms were estimated to run to an average of about half an acre.

The total acreage under cultivation, if those who have gardens followed their April estimates on the sizes of their gardens, is about 7,000,000 acres—an area equivalent to all of the land put to crops in North Carolina in 1940.

Number of Gardens

Here is the victory garden picture by sections, showing the number of gardens grown last year as compared to the number which have been planted this year:

BY SECTIONS	Last year	Gardens in Now
New England and Middle Atlantic (Me., Vt., N. H., R. I., Conn., Mass., N. Y., N. J., Pa., Md., Del., W. Va.)	3,500,000	4,000,000
East Central (Mich., Ohio., Ind., Ill.)	3,000,000	3,500,000
West Central (Wis., Mo., Iowa, Minn., N. D., S. D., Neb., Kan.)	2,500,000	3,000,000

These figures do not include the 2,000,000 who say they still plan to put in a vegetable garden.

Canning

An important question for the War Priorities Board is how many jars and cans and jar tops should be allocated for home canning this year. Here is a rough estimate, based on a survey of women in all parts of the country who were asked (1) whether they plan to do any home canning, (2) how many jars or cans they plan to put up, (3) how many jars, cans and jar tops they think they will have to buy.

On the basis of the survey, 25,000,000 families are planning to can this year.

The total number of jars and cans planned is 4,400,000,000, or about 175 jars or cans per family among those who plan to can.

To do their canning, women will have to buy a total of 650,000,000 cans and jars, and 1,700,000,000 jar tops. This figure is based on their individual estimates of the jars and cans and jar tops they will need. In short, housewives have on hand all but about one-seventh of the jars, cans and jar tops they will need.

Argentina Recognized

U. S., Britain Act

By the Associated Press

Buenos Aires, June 11.—The United States and Britain joined today in the general recognition of the new Argentine government, an action that including warring powers and neutral nations as remote as Sweden.

Formal notice of the United States' and Britain's recognition came soon after the announcement of a decree barring the transmission of outgoing coded messages which had been permitted under the overthrown Castillo regime.

The Japanese followed up the formal recognition yesterday by Germany and Italy when Ambassador Baron Shu Tomii called at the Foreign Office today.

Vice Admiral Segundo Storni, Foreign Minister, told newsmen of his "cordial" half-hour meeting with United States Ambassador Norman Armour which followed shortly after notification of United States recognition.

"I have reached the conclusion," Storni said, "that we are on the road which will bring the closest collaboration between our two countries and the continent in general." He then added, "I am convinced that step by step our country will move toward its rightful position."

The countries notifying the Argentine government of approval today included Mexico, Canada, Hungary, Sweden, Poland, Bulgaria, Colombia, Venzuela, Nicaragua, Ecuador, Greece, the Netherlands and the Dominican Republic.

The ban on coded radio messages, announced last night, was worded in a manner which applies equally to all nations but in actual practice affects only the Axis nations, Germany, Italy and Japan.

Cable transmission still remains open to all but the Axis, since such facilities have long been denied them by the United Nations which control the operating companies.

The Axis may still use the radio for messages written in open language, but United Nations observers agreed that the ban on code will reduce the possibility of the Axis transmitting word of United States ship movements and other information of military value.

U. S., Britain Keep Rubber Reserve Intact

The combined Production and Resources Board revealed yesterday that the United States and British Empire have nursed their rubber supplies along so far without dipping into minimum reserves.

The board, which contains top officials of the United States, the United Kingdom and Canada, made its third report of the war to President Roosevelt. Prime Minister Churchill and Prime Minister Mackenzie King.

Discussing its world-wide studies of the rubber crisis, the board said in a statement that it "made a recommendation that over-all consumption of crude rubber in the United States, United Kingdom, Canada and the rest of the British Empire should be held to a rate which would leave the combined stock of crude rubber on June 30, 1943, at a certain minimum figure. The latest review of the board indicates that the recommended combined minimum stock position will be maintained."

Although the board said nothing publicly about synthetic substitutes, in this country Rubber Director William M. Jeffers has predicted that the flow of factory-made rubber is growing fast enough to begin building up rubber stockpiles by the end of this year.

Hitler Seen Doomed

Assassination Forecast

By the Associated Press

In the opinion of Emil Ludwig, German biographer, "Hitler will be assassinated soon, by his own men."

Appearing before the House Foreign Affairs Committee, testimony of which was made public today, Ludwig said "I feel sure" Hitler will be done away with, "probably by the Junkers, because the Junkers have always been traitors to their kings."

"Then," he continued, "The Junkers, the generals, will kowtow to you and say, 'we love the Americans. We do not hate the Jews. We don't ask for colonies. Come, let us be friends again.'"

Ludwig also expressed the belief air bombing "is the deciding factor that will break the Germans." He said German nerves will collapse under the continued United Nations aerial attack and it won't be necessary to invade Germany.

Sees Defeat Near

Ludwig, a German Jew and a naturalized Swiss, said he appeared before the committee "to tell you and to prove to you why the defeat of Germany is nearer than you think, and what to do with the Germans after their defeat."

Ludwig said "What we fear is what will happen on the day after the death of Hitler."

"After this bad man is not there, and the junkers make you any kind of a friendly offer," he continued, "I fear that certain elements in this country (the United States), and even in this House, would say, 'now let us make peace and let us finish this business. They are good people, those generals.'

Symbols of War Will

"Gentlemen, they are not! They are not one whit better than the Hitlers. The generals, the symbols of German war-will, must be destroyed. As long as they are there every German boy will dream of revenge."

Complete disarmament of Germany must follow the war, Ludwig said, adding:

"Leave to the Germans all that other nations have. But take away their weapons, supervise their education, and give them political guardianship, because they have shown the world they are not able to govern themselves. If you do not do that, if you continue to speak, in the puritan sense, of the 'poor misled German people' if you persist in trying to distinguish between Germans and Nazis, and write every day about battles against Nazis instead of Germans, then, within 20 years, your sons will sit around this oval table and write another declaration of war against Germany."

New Radio Station to Thunder U.S. Propaganda Around World

By the Associated Press

Cincinnati, June 11.—Cincinnati will become a major funnel through which American propaganda will be shot to the rest of the world with power sufficient "to knock any radio off the shelf anywhere," it was disclosed today with announcement that the Crosley Corp.'s experimental short-wave station WLWO would install transmitters with total power of 750,000 watts.

This power, greater even than that of the big Moscow radio, will be achieved through a battery of transmitters to be erected during the next few months, near here.

Crosley officials said the development would represent an expansion of WLWO's present activities of broadcasting exclusively material piped here from the Overseas Office of the Office of War Information in New York. News now is given at 15-minute intervals in all major languages.

These officials said the move also represented a change in American propaganda policy, whereby a few powerful short-wave facilities will be constructed instead of depending on more numerous but weaker stations.

"When they're all in operation," they commented, "we'll be able to beam enough power anywhere to knock a radio set off the shelf in Italy, Germany or Japan. It'll be darned near powerful enough to knock them off when they're not turned on."

When WLWO was operating under an experimental license permitting 500,000-watt power some months ago, it was reported that the broadcasts blanketed the Moscow station's offerings as close as 50 miles to the Russian capital.

WPB to Allow Dining Room 'Silver' Output

By Edwin D. Gritz

Post Staff Writer

Production of "victory model silverware" is expected to start within a month under WPB plans to keep restaurants and similar institutions from operating at decreasing effectiveness through huge losses of such items as spoons and forks, it was learned yesterday.

At present restaurant-type tableware is being produced at less than 35 per cent of normal. The proposed single model is expecter to be without a manufacturer's brand.

The program has been hastened under impetus of reports that many restaurants are in such bad straits that they are dealing with "scavenger" black markets—persons who sift institutional refuse and salvage overlooked eating utensils.

The scavengers, it was said, are reselling knives, forks, and spoons to some restaurants at from $1.75 to $2 a dozen—more than the items cost new.

Through simplification of existing models, it was said, WPB expects to increase present production by about 15 to 20 per cent. Arrangements are being made to distribute production on the basis of need as established by voluntary committees of manufacturers and distributors.

None of this production, it was said, will be available for private homes as officials feel that the need there is not great. In addition, there are still available stocks of quality silverware.

In another move, WPB announced yesterday that shoe manufacturers will be allowed to increase civilian production of shoes whenever military orders subside in any given period.

Bill Calls 5 Justices 'Quorum'

By Robert De Vore

Post Staff Writer

Legislative wheels began to turn in Congress yesterday to make possible conclusion in the United States Supreme Court of the longest trial in American history—the Department of Justice's antitrust suit against the Aluminum Co. of America.

A House Judiciary Subcommittee opened hearings on a bill which, if it becomes law, will make it possible for the first time in 74 years for the court to decide a case with a majority of five justices constituting a legal quorum. Under present law six justices—or two-thirds rather than a simple majority of the court—must participate in a decision.

That law, plus the fact that four justices have disqualified themselves from taking part in the case by reason of their interest in the litigation as former administrative officials of the Government, has prevented the court for many months from considering an action begun April 23, 1937.

While the monumental suit against the Aluminum Co. provides the major interest for the bill introduced by Representative Sumners (Democrat) of Texas, Judiciary Committee chairman, adoption of the measure also would free the court to decide an action involving the North American Co., utility holding firm.

Four justices also have disqualified themselves from hearing this case, thus again leaving the nine-man court lacking one of a legal quorum. A test of the socalled "death sentence" clause of the Utility Holding Company Act is involved in the North American case.

Unless the bill becomes law, the Aluminum Co. cannot fail to win the action. The case was brought to the Supreme Court by the Government after the New York District Court denied its petition for dissolution of the so-called Alcoa trust more than three and a half years after the suit was filed.

Representative Hobbs (Democrat) of Alabama, who is conducting the hearings, said he expected that Alcoa representatives would openly oppose the bill.

First sign of opposition came yesterday from Representative Fellows, Republican member of the committee from Maine.

Charles Warren, noted Supreme Court historian, also indorsed the bill. He told the committee that from 1789 to 1863 a majority of the court constituted a quorum.

Armstrong Whips Angott in Savage Battle

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Boston, June 11.—Any court in the land would quickly uphold Dutch Leonard if he brought "Nonsupport Charges" against his teammates, the Nats. The record reads like a conspiracy by his own ball club to hamstring the big knuckle-baller in his quest for victories.

POVICH

Leonard has won four games thus far and lost four. Except for an 11-2 contest which he annexed he had to bear down grimly to win, because the Nats have habitually gone into a batting slump whenever Leonard has appeared on the mound. He has won his other games by scores of 1-0, 2-1,, and 3-1.

The four games Leonard has lost were dillies. In those four games the Nats scored a total of four runs for him. He was licked by scores of 1-0, 2-1, 3-1, and 3-2. You'd be lying if you said Leonard isn't becoming a little bit irked by it all. He was saying today that he'd like to have a nice, big two-run lead some afternoon so his work wouldn't be so confounded grim all the time.

Like all pitchers, Leonard sets great store by his winning games. That's what gets him his coffee and cakes. "They pay off on how many you win," he says. "When you get beat 1-0, you're just as much licked as if it was 10-0," he says. "I'm not squawking, you understand. Pitching in the big leagues is a lot better than working in the coal mines where I used to have a job. But it would be more fun if they'd get a few more runs for me."

The Philadelphia story, which had been the most engaging chapter of the 1943 baseball season in the early weeks, has finally run into a sour episode. Owner Bill Cox and Manager Bucky Harris of the Phils, are not riding quite so high at this moment as they were a fortnight ago.

The Phils, you remember, were a mild sort of wonder club. Under Harris they had managed to win a fair share of their ball games and even poked their noses into the first division. They drew crowds as high as 35,000 at home, and the town's fans were hailing Harris and Cox as wonder-workers.

Then the Phils started losing ball games. They ran into one six-game slump. For that, there was no disposition to condemn Harris or Cox, however. They couldn't go out and belt runs across the plate personally. Nobody could get mad at the Phils merely because they lost ball games.

But last week Philadelphia did see cause to get angry at the Philly outfit. Cox and Harris traded away Danny Litwhiler, the outfielder who for three years had been the best player on the club. They sent him to the Cardinals for three young players who never had made good in the big leagues.

It was an old twist to the Philadelphia story. Trading off the club's best players had been the habit of the deposed Nugent regime, and the new owners had given a sort of promise that it wouldn't happen with them. Unlike Nugent, Cox didn't sell Litwhiler for cash, so he can't be accused of money-grabbing. But that doesn't alter the fact that the Phils' boss had traded away the fans' most popular player.

The customers, who, in the first month of the season, had supported the Phillies in tremendous numbers at the gate, are now fuming. The city's baseball-writing press, which suave Bucky Harris had charmed with his great good fellowship, wouldn't hold still, either, for the Litwhiler trade. There have been pot-shots in the direction of both Harris and Cox ever since the deal was announced.

The people don't think that Cox and Harris got enough for Litwhiler, and logically, too. If the deal proves a mistake, as it threatens to, then the Phils' front office has stupidly played free and easy with the customers' affections, and that is never healthy.

When the Nats played an exhibition game in Springfield, Mass., the other night, we learned of another interesting incident in the stormy career of little Ellis Clary, the bristling third baseman of the Washington Club.

Clary came to the Nats last year with a reputation as a hot-tempered half-pint who would fight at the drop of a hint that a person didn't like him. He had fought both ball players and fans at the Nats' farms in Charlotte, Greenville and Chattanooga. But the stories about Clary never quite rang true during his first season with the Nats when he was a model of behavior.

Not until last month when Clary finally tangled with Catcher Johnny Peacock of the Red Sox, could we believe all the Clary stories. And then the other night we heard this one in Springfield.

"Clary was a great ball player with Springfield in 1940. Too bad they had to ship him away. You know what happened, don't you? Some fans behind the Springfield dugout were heckling him one night. Clary didn't do anything but grab the water bucket and empty it right in the faces of the customers. That washed him up in Springfield."

Henry Gets Unanimous 10-Rd. Nod

Ex-Triple Champ Spent at Finish; 13,364 Fans Pour $55,502 Into Till

By Bob Considine

New York, June 11.—Bloody old Henry Armstrong called on 13 years of ring guile and the heart that made him the world's first triple champion to beat Sammy Angott tonight at Madison Square Garden in 10 savage rounds.

The old champ won the unanimous nod of Referee Eddie Joseph and the two judges before a crowd of 13,364 which paid $55,502 at Mike Jacobs' bucks office.

But it was a gruelling evening and, at the end, Henry had nothing left in his tight little mahogany fists, and the bright blood was drooling off his white mouthpiece and out of his flat nose. He had spent all he had but, unlike his financial expending, he knew when and where to spend it.

Armstrong 8-5 Underdog

Armstrong was an 8-to-5 underdog against the Louisville Italian who succeeded romantic Lew Jenkins as lightweight champion only to give up the crown with a strange abdication which still confuses Jacobs Beach.

But Armstrong paid no attention to the odds. He took charge with, at times, a finality that brought back sharp and poignant memories of one of the great fist fighters of the age.

There were no knockdowns in this hurly-burly, rough and rumbling match. Twice the clumsy Angott slipped in the resin goo in Armstrong's corner and went down heavily on one knee. The first time this happened Henry had a jolting little right all cranked up and ready to fly, but he held it. The second time he couldn't hold it and nearly went out of the ring when he swung at the smoky air that had once been displaced by Angott.

Angott started well, thumping the ever-approaching Armstrong with uppercuts in the first round. But Henry's aim, which now is that of a shotgun instead of a rifle, was better in the second and he won the round. In the third Angott stopped trying to beat Henry at close quarters, a task that is still too difficult for fighters of Henry's weight, stepped around nimbly and stuck his way to a margin.

Mystifying to Angott

But in the fourth Henry caught up with him and got even with a stirring finish. In the fifth Henry was the Armstrong of old, not a reasonable facsimile, and he clipped Angott with bruising short punches.

In the sixth he subsided, short of wind, but his weaving and bobbing was too mystifying for Angott's loose, stumbling attack.

Angott had a premonition of his doom in the seventh and fought fiercely to win the round. But, despite the assurance of Angott's seconds, Henry wasn't through. He proved that at the opening of the eighth by sinking a right into Angott's belly that must have stopped only when it reached Angott's spine.

Sammy nearly went down. Henry stalked him and punched his lumpy face but Sammy grinned fiercely and waved for Henry to "come on and fight." Henry did.

On the Line: How Nile Kinnick Met His Death

With CONSIDINE

New York, June 11.—Nile Kinnick, the All-America gridman, who lost his life in action recently, was as cool in the face of death as he was when he ran, passed and drop-kicked Dr. Eddie Anderson's Iowa team to national honors.

CONSIDINE

This is how he died:

Not long after taking his Wildcat fighter plane off the deck of one of America's new aircraft carriers, Kinnick radioed back to the carrier that his oil pressure was very low. He asked permission to return to the flight deck.

But the planes of other men were spread over the deck, preparing to take off.

"Can you give us 10 minutes?" the ship asked him by radio.

"I'm not sure," Kinnick answered, with no emotion in his voice. "But I'll try."

After five minutes the carrier's deck still was too cluttered for a safe landing, though the Navy was working furiously to clear a space for him. The nearest land was out of sight, and out of range of Kinnick's ailing fighter.

Kinnick had to come down in the water. If he had taken a chance and tried to land on the deck he might have survived at perhaps the cost of other lives and much equipment, by way of collisions.

The officers of the ship, and his buddies still aboard, watched Kinnick struggle with his plane as he came closer and closer to the water, several miles from the carrier. The wheels of the Wildcat were tucked up, and the prop was barely spinning. But it is a fast ship and Kinnick came down fast. His air-borne buddies, certain they'd see him clamber out of the fighter after he hit the drink, circled and dived low over him as he swooped toward the water.

Kinnick hit fast. His fighter bounced like a flat stone, then dug in with a great geyser and stopped hard. It remained afloat for a minute, held up by the bouyancy of its stubby wings.

But the hatch over Kinnick's head never swung back. By the time the mothering destroyer reached the scene the plane had sunk. Some of the boys who helplessly watched the tragedy from above said they saw him climb out. But it probably was just wreckage they saw. The consensus was that Kinnick never got out. He apparently was knocked unconscious in the landing—and he went down with his ship.

His superior officers, as well as the youngsters on the ship, felt his loss keenly. He was by all odds the star man of his young group. He had shown them more than enough to convince them that he would have become a great fighter pilot.

Craig Wood, who'll be our National Open champion until there is another United States Open—and perhaps after that—underwent an operation last February that was a "kill or cure" for the serious back trouble that threatened to turn him into an invalid. He was in bed three months.

Several days ago his doctor finally told him it might be all right for him to try to hit a golf ball again. Craig went out to his Winged Foot course to face a verdict which, if sour, would have deprived him of his central means of livelihood and his great joy in life.

He shot a 72 over the tough championship course. The next day he shot a 69. Yesterday he shot a 67. He starts in the Metropolitan Amateur-Pro championship at Forest Hills Club, today.

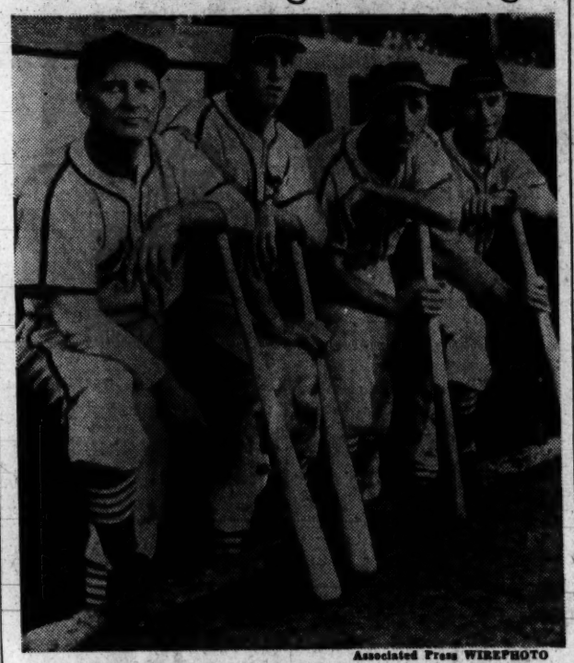
Cards' Batting Consistency Reason for High Standing



Associated Press WIREPHOTO

THOSE CONSISTENT CARDS—Hitting in consecutive games is their forte These Cardinals, reading left to right, "Whitey" Kurowski, Stan Musial, Harry Walker and Lon Klein, have been running up batting streaks at one time or another, which has been one of the big reasons why the Cards are doing so well so early in the season. Walker, only one of the quartet on a consecutive streak, has increased his string to 17 games.

Kurowski, Klein, Musial and Walker All Have Had Great Stick Streaks

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, June 11.—Like annual fashion shows, you can expect the astounding World Champion Cardinals to come up with something new every season. This year it's consecutive hitting streaks, baseball's jewel of consistency.

First it was Whitey Kupowski, chunky third baseman who hit safely in 22 consecutive games before Al Javery of the Boston Braves stopped him May 26. But that didn't ease the tension on opposing hurlers.

For Lou Klein, rookie infielder, was right on Kuprowski's heels. He slammed out his seventeenth hit on the day Kupowski was zeroed, and it was not until May 31, after hitting safely in 21 consecutive contests, that Klein went down before Kirbie Higbee and Rube Melton of the Brooklyn Dodgers.

But—and like consecutive hitting, the story continues—there was hard-hitting Stan Musial coming down the slugging stretch, whaling away at all deliveries and doing a walloping good job of it.

However, the veteran Si Johnson of Philadelphia curbed the youthful aspirant in an abbreviatel five-inning game last Sunday, breaking the outfielder's streak at 22 straight.

But that isn't the end. Outfielder Harry Walker already has started his turn and he's hiking up the trail with a record of having hit in 16 consecutive games as of today.

"Consistency is a great factor, makes us a dangerous club," Manager Billy Southworth chortled. "We've had one or more men on hitting splurges all season. Whenever we get men on base, with such consistent hitters, we're dangerous, mighty dangerous. The opposing team just can't relax."

Nats' Weak Stickwork Irks Bluege

By Shirley Povich

Post Staff Writer

Boston, June 11.—The Nats are still a second-place ball club, and that's the trouble with 'em apparently.

They finished second to the Red Sox in yesterday's game and they finished second to the Sox the day before, and Manager Ossie Bluege is more than slightly irked at the recent goings-on. He'd like to win a few games from the Red Sox.

Ballplayers are a strange breed. Bluege and the rest of the Nats agree that the Red Sox aren't much of a ball team. They stick to that conclusion even after taking two straight beatings from the Boston Club. "That team has no license to beat us two in a row," says Bluege.

There isn't much that Bluege can do about the situation, though. Ordinarily, a manager might shake up his line-up after watching his team accumulate only two runs in two days, but Bluege is helpless along that line. He has no replacements who figure to contribute anything more to the club's batting attack.

Leave Runs on Base

"No wonder Bucky Harris got gray-haired as a manager," says Bluege. "When we left Washington four days ago, it looked as if we had finally started to hit. Everybody was meeting the ball. But up here we've been leaving runners on the base like a bush league club. We can't buy a hit when it's important."

There has been no complaint with the Nats' pitching on the trip thus far. Dutch Leonard lost a 3-2 game and Early Wynn was beaten, 2-0. In each game the Nats had enough runners on base to win by a half-dozen runs, but the important hit wasn't forthcoming.

Tomorrow, Bluege will send Milo Candini after a victory against the Red Sox. They'll be facing the right-handed pitching of Yank Terry. There'll be no line-up changes among the Nats. Bluege says he is forced to string along with the same team, which looks like his best club.

Johnson Goes Hitless

Bob Johnson has been hitless in the two games here, but there's no thought of benching him. He's still the best outfielder on the club. Mickey Vernon, who when last seen in Washington was a red-hot article with a bat in his hands, has sloughed off sharply. Gerry Priddy has been another offender.

Bluege had been tempted to bench Alex Kampouris and restore little Ellis Clary to third base in an attempt to step up tht Nats' hitting, but he has abandoned that idea temporarily. Kampouris walloped a home run far over the left-field wall on Wednesday, and defensively he has been acting like the world's greatest third baseman, so Clary is destined to stay on the bench.

Trojans Defend Title Today

N. Y. U. Has 8 Ready For N. C. A. A. Finals

Violets Qualify 7 and Have Zoellner For 880 and Mile; California Strong

By the Associated Press

Evanston, Ill., June 11.—New York University's Violets, the strongest Eastern team to enter the National Collegiates in more than a decade, dominated qualifying trials in today's preliminaries of the twenty-second annual N. C. A. A. track and field championships, and at once became favorites to end Southern California's eight-year reign in tomorrow's finals.

N. Y. U. placed names of its athletes on tomorrow's finalist roster seven times, but has even more strength than that. For its outstanding 880-yard and mile runner, Ray Zoellner, is ready to go tomorrow at those distances over the Northwestern University Dyche Stadium course.

Southern California's Trojans surprised everyone who had lightly dismissed their chances of repeating a ninth consecutive time. They qualified six men, including defending quarter-mile champion Cliff Bourland in both the 440 and 220 dashes.

Washington Has Five

Still out to make a contest of it were Washington, with five qualifiers, and California, Ohio State and the United States Naval Academy with four apiece.

Included among California's preliminary placers was Harold Davis, winner of both the 100 and 220 dashes last year, who came home ahead of the field today in both sprints. But although the track was fast, Davis barely cruised to go the century in 10 second and the 220 in 22 seconds.

N. Y. U. performers placed in six events, with Frank Cotter and Charles Grohsberger both clicking in the 440-yard run. Edward Conwell came through in the 100 and 220 dashes, Warren Halliburton in the low hurdles, Bernard Mayer in the shot-put and Leonard Bates in the discus.

Southern California stayed well up with Bourland in the 220 dash and 440, Jack Trout in the 100 and 220 dashes, Douglas Miller in the javelin, and Edsel Curry in the broad jump. Washington qualified Robert Smith in the 220 dash, Evert Pitman in the 440, Richard Yantis in the discus, William Kydd in the javelin, and Thomas Kamm in the broad jump.

Debus is Busy

The day's busiest individual was Howard Debus of Nebraska. Only member of his team to come East, he placed in the shot, discus and javelin, to make the Cornhuskers one of three teams to trail the leaders with three qualifiers each. The others were Rice and Minnesota.

The defending broad jump champion, Dallas Dupre of Ohio State, was third in those trials while the meet's fourth returning individual title-holder, vaulter Jack De Field of Minnesota, was not called on for competition today.

Illinois, who has strong title hopes based on able performers in the mile and 2-mile, landed Robert Kelley and Leroy Vranek in the 440 finals and both are entered in the 880, in which no qualifying was held today because of a small field.

Yankees Edge Mackmen With Etten's Aid, 2-1

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, June 11.—Big Nick Etten, the former Philly, came back to Philadelphia tonight to lead the New York Yankees to a 2-1 victory over the Athletics, hammering a homer in the third and scoring the winning run in the eighth after rapping a double to right field.

Etten's two bingles were half of the total the Yankees collected off Orrie Arntzen in the eight innings he worked. Pinch Hitter Roberto Estalella, batting for Arntzen, singled in the eighth and John Welaj, who ran for Estalella, scored the A's only run. Everett Fagan set the Yanks down in order in their half of the ninth.

Charley Wensloff went the distance for the Yankees, allowing eight scattered hits as he hung up his third victory against as many defeats. The win boosted the Yankees' lead to three games.

A crowd of 25,229 jammed Shibe Park to watch Wensloff and Arntzen hook up in one of the prettiest pitching duels here this year. Except for Etten's two big blows Arntzen gave a standout performance, but Wensloff bore down in the pinches and had the game under control most of the time.

Just before the game started Connie Mack had listed Wensloff as one of the outstanding rookies in the League, pointing out that he has finished every game he has started in his first major league season.

8307 Early Birds Set Record To See Reds Beat Cubs, 7 to 4

By the Associated Press

Chicago, June 11.—The largest crowd to see a morning game in the major leagues this season—8307, including 5307 paid admissions—turned out at 11 a. m. to see the cellar Cubs and Cincinnati today, and the Reds cut loose a 14-hit attack, including Ray Mueller's first 1943 homer, to win, 7 to 4.

The game was the fourth pre-noon affair tried in the majors this year and the attendance exceeded the combined attendance at Cincinnati's two morning games and almost tripled the Boston Red Sox' before-lunch crowd.

Ray Starr shut out the Chicagoans for seven innings while the Reds were giving him a 7-0 lead. Starr weakened in the eighth, however, and allowed four runs before Clyde Shoun came in to mop up for him.

The Reds had a wild sixth inning in which Gerry Walker led off with a single and then scored all the way from first base on a pop single back of shortstop by Frank McCormick, who slapped at a pitchout when he saw Walker break for second on a hit and run. McCormick's hit dropped back of Shortstop Lenny Merullo, who was running in to cover second, and before Merullo could retrieve the ball, Walker scored easily. Singles by Steve Mesner, Eric Tipton and Eddie Miller meant three more runs and brought in Hi Bithorn to relieve Lonnie Warneke.

Chief Teddy Again Triumphs at Long Odds

Pays $21.20 Mutuel On War Fund Race; Purport Is Second, With Chronos Third

By Walter Haight

A Staff Correspondent

Charles Town, W. Va., June 11.—L. E. Torreyson's Chief Teddy turned in his second longshot victory of the meeting in today's sixth race, top event of the Friday National War Fund program. With Jockey Carson Kirk doing the booting, Chief Teddy finished four lengths in advance of his closest opposition. Mrs. Tom Lewis' Purport nosed out M. Gilbert's Chronos for the second money in the battle of about 7 furlongs.

It was to the tune of a $21.20 mutuel price that Chief Teddy turned back, among others, J. L. Friedman's Jack's Star, the favorite in the field of seven. The track was heavy, but drying out as the program progressed, and Chief Teddy was clocked in the mediocre time of 1:30.

Kirk took Chief Teddy to the front at the clubhouse turn and from that point to the end it was "no contest." Jack's Star had some early speed and then faltered as Chronos moved up closest to the peace. Chronos could not get within striking distance of the leader, however, and lost the place money to the closing drive of Purport.

The $25.80 pay-off on the daily double was far above the parley on the two winners involved. Norman Corbin's Sir Winks won the first race under Jockey Sammy Palumbo's handling and paid $4.60. J. E. Simmons' Remolee, ridden by Jockey J. Beedle, took the second event at $5.40.

Selections at Charles Town

First race—SAINT PYREWICK may get a change of riders for this and take it all. I'm going to string along. COLESTI F has speed and belongs close. Oomph for the show end. If it rains, put Oddree on top.

Second race—BELFONDA BOY had poor racing luck last out and can beat these. SALLY LUNN failed to run her race the other day and is much better. CLOCK TIME is a possibility.

Third race—WHIRL AND TWIRL is a brand new one. Has a Churchill Downs race in the books that is a honey. MISS ADDIE and BROCADE for the place and show.

Fourth race—LOVE MARK needs a fast track and if the oval improves this one should take it all. ROLLS ROUGH is better than shown. COME DOWN had speed last time.

Fifth race—CHOP STICKS appears to have a lock and key on this purse. GREY FLASH has speed but falters. FREE BOY has been training well.

Sixth race—BABY BOY set the pace for good ones in a recent effort and may lead all the way in this. JACK HORNER has a bit of class. CHARLENE for the minor money.

Seventh race—HONEYMAID has the speed and the rail position. May take it all. FAIR FLAME and ELECTRIC to fill out the cash circle.

Eighth race—ROUGH AMOS has had poor racing luck in most races. The inside post should help him. UPSETTING jogged last out. TACARO LILLY for the show.

Best bet—CHOP STICKS.

Coup D'Etat Prevented Civilian Uprising

INSIDE FACT about the Argentine revolution is that it was planned for June 15. Furthermore, it was planned by pro-democratic civilian elements friendly to the United States. In fact, it was even planned by certain Argentines who visited in this country and conferred with United States officials.

However, reactionary Argentine army leaders, knowing what the civilians were up to, jumped the gun on them, seized the government ten days in advance.

Actually United States officials, in an extremely delicate position, kept aloof from the civilian plans. They would not plot against a Latin-American government, even though that government had not been friendly.

However, certain powerful Argentine leaders, who carry great weight with the masses of the people, came to the United States and discussed plans to install a pro-American government which would break with the Axis immediately.

Some observers wish United States officials had taken a definite part in these civilian revolt plans, despite international ethics. For the Argentine military government, even in revised form, has been a bitter disappointment. However, to have egged on the revolt would have meant a revision of the Good Neighbor policy. That policy has been to keep absolutely aloof from Latin-American internal affairs, particularly revolutions. Past experience has shown that mixing into Latin-American politics leads to United States Marines and that, in turn, leads to ill-will.

Capitol Chaff

DEMOCRATIC Chairman Frank Walker did a little hatchet-burying with his old friend Jim Farley in New York the other day. He undermined Jim's strength as New York State Democratic chairman by removing his right to make appointments for postmasterships and Federal jobs. This prerogative had been left to Jim despite his quarrel with the President . . . Lovely Congresswoman Clare Luce of Connecticut has been deluged with offers to write magazine articles and newspaper columns ever since she came to Congress. She has turned them all down. However, when she did consent to write, without remuneration, a weekly column for United States troops in India who publish the New Delhi "Roundup," she got panned by Washington socialites. Fact is Clare is writing a zippy column in an equally zippy newspaper which attracts attention even when it gets back here one week late . . . Solicitor General Charley Fahy of Santa Fe, N. Mex., can have Judge Carl Vinson's job on the United States Court of Appeals in the District of Columbia—if he wants it. (Vinson resigned to replace Jimmy Byrnes as Economic Stabilizer) . . . On the other hand, backstage operators are pushing Cliff Durr, forthright Federal Communications Commissioner, for the Appeals Court. He is too tough an Administration defender on the FCC for certain old-liners, who want to pull a Thurman Arnold on him, retiring him to the cloistered chambers of the court.

MacArthur Boom

MICHIGAN'S SENATOR Arthur Vandenberg, ardent booster of General MacArthur for President, has been telling friends: "To show you what divergent extremes are attracted to this man MacArthur—little Clare Luce and I have a compact that I will nominate him and she will second the nomination." But Clare Luce, writing in her Delhi (India) "Roundup" column, says: "Amazed over talk about the Republican boomlet, 'MacArthur for President,' led by New York's Ham Fish and Michigan's Senator Arthur Vandenberg, hundreds of MacArthur's friends and millions of his fans, who know the general himself disapproves, were occasioned much distress."

Rationing the Senate

THE TRIALS of war and the disasters of rationing have not altered the fact that the favorite dish of Senators in the Senate Restaurant is ham and eggs.

Furthermore, the ration board has been a lot more generous with the Senate Restaurant in the last few months. The manager has been able to buy hams more readily, and even have a fairly steady flow of steaks. Total number of ration points allotted to the Senate Restaurant—which serves the public as well as the Senators—is 22,000 for a two-month period.

Among the unrationed foods, the Senators are going strong for spaghetti, shad roe, and deep dish cherry pie. The pie is a "company dish" served at the special luncheons for such distinguished guests as Anthony Eden, Winston Churchill, and Madame Chiang Kai-shek. Actually, it was put on the "company" menu not by a Senator, but by Congressman Sol Bloom, chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, because cherry pie happens to be a favorite of Sol's.

Among vegetables, the Senators are going strong for black-eyed peas, kale and spinach.

Rationing is no problem for Vice President Wallace, who has the same luncheon for days on end. The tray carried to his private office behind the Senate chamber consists of a rye bread-cheese sandwich made with Wisconsin cheese, a dill pickle and a dish of ice cream.

NOTE: Chief problem of the Senate Restaurant is not food, but tips. Senators regard the restaurant as their own, not just a public eating place, and they tip accordingly—5 cents, 10 cents, or nothing at all. Waiters prefer jobs downtown, where they can find a quarter under the plate.

Mrs. Dempsey Denies Charge Of Infidelities

By the Associated Press

White Plains, N. Y., June 11.—Heavyweight Champion Jack Dempsey's wife, musical comedy's Hannah Williams, denied today infidelities with the two men her husband named as corespondents in his divorce suit and she also testified that on several occasions Dempsey told her "some day I'm going to kill you."

The former champion, now a lieutenant commander in the Coast Guard, had submitted testimony from various persons intended to back his contention that Mrs. Dempsey had misconducted herself with Benny Woodall, former fighter and trainer, and Lew Jenkins, former lightweight champion.

Mrs. Dempsey has filed a countersuit but her allegations have not been made public.

"Did you commit adultery with Benny Woodall?" her attorney, Gerald Donovan, asked Hannah.

Q. "With Lew Jenkins?"

A. "Of course not."

In New York State adultery is the only ground for divorce.

This was the second day Hannah was on the witness stand.

Hannah, describing one occasion when she returned home to Scarsdale, N. Y., after being out with her sister and two girl friends, said Dempsey accused her of having been out with men. She added:

"He pushed me down on the bed and held his fist up, and started to bring it down."

She said she pleaded with him not to strike her, but "Mr. Dempsey hit me, causing a black eye. He said he was going to kick me downstairs and out of the house."

Hannah related that at one time, while they were living at the San Remo Apartments in New York City, Dempsey complained about the food bills being too high, called in the cook and maid and informed them:

"'Don't take orders from Mrs. Dempsey; she's crazy half the time.'"

Mrs. Dempsey said Jack also complained that it cost him from $1000 to $1250 a month to run the apartment.

Legion, Elks Sponsor Rites For Flag Day

A brave symbol of united democracy in a critical time, the American flag will be honored by American millions in celebration of its 166th birthday tomorrow, with District ceremonies sponsored by the American Legion and the Elks.

The celebrations climax Washington's observance of Flag Week, which ends Monday with Flag Day.

With lower attendance anticipated because of the gasoline shortage, the American Legion ceremonies will start at 3 p. m. in Meridian Hill Park with Fred G. Fraser, national vice commander of the organization, the principal speaker. Allegiance to the colors will be given by Gail T. Judd, Flag Day chairman; the benediction will be rendered by the Rev. Howard Snyder, past department chaplain, and a solo sung by Miss Hilda Nelson will round out the ceremonies.

Massing of the colors will be directed by Capt. James C. Clarke of the legion's national guard of honor, and for the first time in Washington, a new Four Freedoms flag will, in lone but full-furled dignity, replace the thickly clustered 31 banners usually representing the United Nations.

The new flag, illustrating a "practical" way of paying honor and respect to freedom-loving people everywhere, has four upright bars of red on a white field. Its use in the ceremonies has been sanctioned by all the United Nations in unofficial discussions with Brooks Harding, chairman of the Four Freedoms Committee.

The flag will be displayed later at the "Night of Thrills" at Griffith Stadium next Friday, when it will be featured at the Masonic benefit in the United Nations flag pageant.

The Elks' program will start at 3:30 in front of the Elks' Club, 919 H Street Northwest, when members of the organization, of the Costello Post and other American Legion groups, and the Jewish War Veterans will mass, and parade to the Mall.

Little Food Waste Found in Navy, Knox Reports

A committee of food experts reported to Secretary Knox yesterday that there is very little waste of food in the Navy and that some naval stations are facing critical shortages of beef, poultry, potatoes and other items.

The shortages were blamed in part on "inequities" in distribution. The committee said "one large station on the East Coast was unable to obtain beef in sufficient quantities for a period of weeks, while another station . . . obtained all the beef it needed without interruption."

The committee, headed by Clarence Francis, president of the General Foods Corp., recommended the creation of a coordinating division with a single responsible head which apparently would have the job of reconciling and balancing all food requirement estimates by all governmental agencies.

Knox Hails Fall Of Pantelleria As Step Ahead

By the Associated Press

Secretary of the Navy Knox said yesterday that the surrender of Pantelleria removed a fortress "in an area where we want to clean things up," and was about the same "as if the Italians had captured Malta," the British island nearby.

Questioned at a press conference as to whether it would be necessary to take other Axis-held islands in the Mediterranean, the Secretary said that "several will have to be taken before the sea is completely cleared."

WHAT'S ALL THIS FUSS ABOUT

All Hair Mattresses

Even when featherbeds were in vogue. Even when innerspring mattresses had their heyday. Even when revolutionary latex-and-air mattresses startled the world. Even then . . . a great fuss was being made over the all-hair mattress. No wonder! It's always been the quintessence of sleeping luxury. Buoyant . . . spring-y . . . firm. Wonderfully comfortable because it supports you on an even keel from stem to stern. Permits you to lie with your spine in walking position . . . just as a good mattress should. Adjusts easily, noiselessly to your every move. Delightfully cool in summer because the resilient hairs allow free circulation of air. Warm in winter with blankets to hold in body heat . . . and healthfully ventilated to boot. Truly the last word in comfort. Generally fabulously expensive. But we scooped up a mere fifty to sell at 39.50 each.

Abundantly upholstered mattresses. Each and every strand of hair subjected to intense heat. Thoroughly sterilized. Tightly curled for lasting elasticity . . . so each one is like a little spring. Covered with 8-ounce woven striped ticking . . . not a wisp of hair can seep through. Tape tufted. "Blind" stitched on the sides. It won't lump, sag or stretch. It will stay firm and shapely. (You know that hair is used in men's suits so the lapels and shoulders will retain their shape.) And experience prooves it . . . there's nothing like an all hair mattress for years of service. 39.50

Govlins Take Over Choice Spots in Offices

Something new has been discovered in Government offices. It's the Govlins. These strange little creatures are at large in the offices of the Coordinator of inter-American Affairs in the Commerce Department Building. Employes have been warned to be on the lookout for them in an office memo. But by the memo's description, the Govlins have moved in and taken over choice spots in about every Federal office. It says that Govlins aren't related to Gremlins as they (gremlins) are "figments of the imagination and as such are not recognized by Government agencies." The memo then gives all available information on the Govlins.

GOVLIN.

"Govlins," the memo says, "make their home in filing cabinets. They live on Scotch tape and paper clips not to mention staples. In hot weather they wear pointed foolscap made of interoffice memos and playsuits cut out of the very finest blue sheets. They have their own idea on how material should be filed and are apt for instance, to switch Brazilian projects to Argentine press reports. Or else they'll fish out a dispatch and place it on an official's desk. When the official bawls out his secretary for not being able to produce the dispatch, she can point out that it is under his nose. This makes the official look silly.

"Their favorite sport is a game which consists of bouncing on typewriter keys, a point being scored for every wrxnj k?p which is struck by the person using the typewriter. An intriguing variation of this game may be played on the National War Agencies switchboard, with points for wrong numbers, disconnections and conversations overheard by ears for which they were not intended. The highest score obtainable is made when a Govlin manages to interject 'That's what you think, you jackass' into a parley between two important officials, leaving each one under the impression that the offensive words were uttered by the other.

"The head Govlin is known as the Discombobulator of Interoffice Affairs, with headquarters on the third floor. He is assisted by an assistant discombobulator, who, in turn, is assisted by a deputy assistant discombobulator to the assistant discombobulator. Their special function is to suggest screwy policies to the executives. Govlins hold civil service rank and are promoted according to their ingenuity in devising chicaneries to confuse the personnel." The final bit of advice to employes is that "Govlins should be severely ignored."

Patterson Elaborates

The statement of War Undersecretary Robert Patterson that the department soon will reduce its civilian employes by 100,000 has created so much unrest and uncertainty among the department's employes here that an "elaboration of his testimony" was sent to the Ramspeck Committee late yesterday. The employes were reassured in the elaboration that they have nothing to fear if they perform satisfactory work. The statement hinted that very few, if any, employes would be actually fired by explaining that the normal rate of turnover was 5 per cent a month and the department could bring about a substantial reduction merely by refusing to fill vacancies. This reporter felt at the time that Patterson made his 100,000 statement in an off-hand manner and it was something he hoped for rather than something that was positive to happen. His "elaboration" said:

"This reduction in staff will not be accomplished immediately. No employes will be indiscriminately dismissed if they are satisfactorily performing their work . . . Furthermore, as our male workers depart for military service some of their positions may be abolished, thus reducing the number of employes. In addition, some employes can look to reassignment to other positions for more effective use of their skills." In other words, the ax definitely won't be swung on War Department employes here for a long time to come.

LETTERS: "This is my first summer in Washington and when I read of the Brotherhood of Sensible Men my first reaction was that it was a silly idea. Since then I've been barely able to live through five days of 90-degree heat and now I'm eager to exchange my hot clothes for cool and comfortable slacks. I'll be wearing slacks in the office on Tuesday so don't let me down, brothers. H. T. K." . . . "If the Brotherhood of Sensible Men were really sensible, it would be sensible enough to realize that the loosened-tie-unbuttoned-collar-rolled-up sleeves garb is just as cool and comfortable as those zoot pajamas known as slack suits—and infinitely much better looking.—Sidney H. Kasper. "(This is the first critical letter received on the B. S. M.)

"When the B. S. M. (and more power to 'em) get together Tuesday afternoon to declare their independence, it would be a very bad idea to burn good coats, ties, and shirts. It would ruin the worthy movement if that were done. The clothes should be sent to our fighting Allies.—J. R. M." Editor's note: Only a few high and stiff collars, badly soiled, will be burned. And we hope the whole idea burns some stuff shirts.

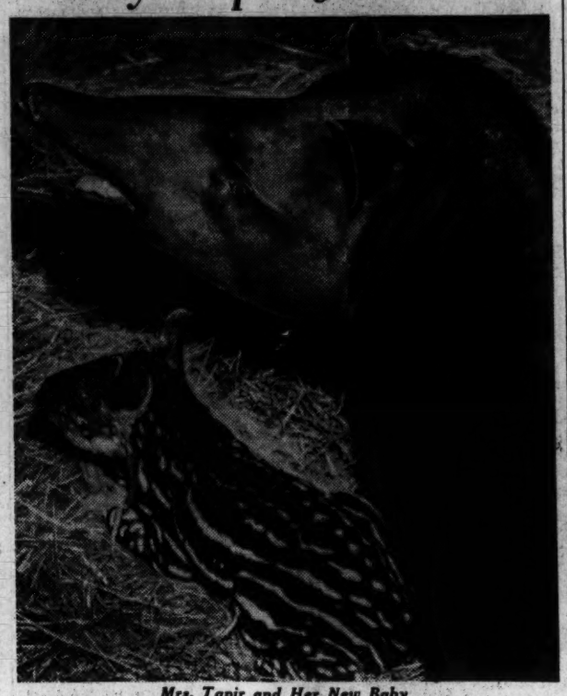
Miss Tapir Makes Bow at Zoo In Natty Striped Jacket



Mrs. Tapir and Her New Baby

Miss Nellie Tapir, day-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. A. Tapir, made her bow to the world yesterday in the large mammal house of the Zoo, sporting a natty tan and white striped jacket (non zoot) and the longest nose of any baby in town.

The Tapir family, representatives of a fine old South American clan, originally came from the forest regions east of the Andes and were brought to the Zoo in 1939. Nellie is their second child: the first, born two years ago, was traded off to another zoo for another variety of animal.

Viewed yesterday, Nellie was wobbly but agreeable. And Momma Tapir (who is feeling quite well, thank you) was equally willing to be interviewed, but had a slight case of hiccups. Daddy sat in his front yard and sunned moodily, casting an occasional disdainful glance in the direction of his new daughter.

Tapirs are gentle, unassuming animals, distant relatives of the horse. The resemblance practically is nonexistent, however; tapirs are four-toed, long-snouted and have only a suggestion of a mane. Excellent swimmers, they are found in forest regions and on river banks in their native habitat, but their Zoo quarters are much swankier, including a special pool for their comfort.

Nellie will lose her camouflaging stripes in about eight months and will turn dark brown, Zoo folk declare. Although Mrs. Tapir is an excellent and devoted mother, she is almost as interested in lettuce leaves, grain and hay as she is in the new arrival.

Coupon 17 Holders Mob Shoe Stores

Misfit Headaches Sure to Follow Indiscriminate Buying, Dealers Say

Local shoe stores, beset by unprecedented crowds intent on cashing in their No. 17 shoe ration coupon before the deadline Tuesday midnight, are locking their doors against crushing mobs, and only opening them long enough to let a customer in to replace one going out.

Dealers were at a loss to explain why so many shoe coupons suddenly appeared. Many thought shoppers were loathe to have the coupon voided by the time limit, and purchased shoes whether needed now or not.

"The crowds kept getting larger and the shoe stocks smaller, and the coupons are still coming in," said Maurice Berg, owner of the Penn Bootery at 652 Pennsylvania Avenue Southeast.

Price seemed of no consequence, for when cheaper styles ran out, buyers asked for higher priced shoes without hesitation.

Proprietors said the rush started a week ago and has gained momentum ever since. Many dealers were out of average sizes, and customers were taking what they could get.

"Popular sizes available now won't last over a day or two," said Mrs. E. L. Sailer of the Walk-Over Shoe Shop at 929 F Street Northwest.

Clerks said that people were taking footwear not suited to them, and in many cases not even a near fit. They warned that the number of complaints arising out of this buying spree would be "simply terrific."

Women appeared to predominate in the shopping crowds with many asking for the white styles now conceded to be as rare as an Axis victory, but store managers said that men also were doing plenty of buying.

"There were plenty of them standing in the street around our store when we were forced to lock the door at 5:30 last night," asserted Julius Merican, manager of Ross-Saturn at 1323 Connecticut Avenue Northwest.

And so while one dealer stated he was finally forced to shoo his customers out, and another complained that all seats in his shop were taken, and he couldn't sit down for "even a minute," the hapless salesman muttered, "Why did I get into this business, anyway?"

Ringling-Barnum Circus to Arrive In D.C. Tomorrow

Tomorrow the big show comes to town. Tomorrow the Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus, traveling on its long railroad trains, with the blessings of the ODT on its tented might, is due to unload on the Pennsylvania Railway sidings.

But today there's a busy man at the show grounds at Benning Road and Oklahoma Avenue Northeast, where performances will be given at 2:15 and 8:15 p. m. Monday. He is the 24-hour man, William Carr, who may be likened to a pilot conning ships safely into harbor, for he does that and more for the circus.

The 24-hour man must make sure that the railroad crossings are in order to permit swift unloading, and, if necessary, he must have the crossing cleared and planked. He then must see that the route to the circus grounds is practical.

Meanwhile, the Monday night war bond performance already is a sell-out. Allan Lester, Ringling advance agent, reported yesterday that more than a million dollars in war bonds already had been sold.

City Briefs

Dog Owners Warned to Get New Tags

Warning that new dog tags for the coming fiscal year will be out soon was issued yesterday by District Tax Collector Guy Pearson.

Pearson said the Commissioners had adopted a new plastic material, different from the fabroid used last year, ending the use of the gray fiber previously employed. The new tag will consist of a plastic substance using gold lettered indentures, which would not be so subject to erasure by weather or by chewing on the part of the dogs.

Attached to this warning was a reminder by the District government that dogs should be kept on leash, if not muzzled, for the duration of the hot-weather rabies period.

Joins Dental Examiners

The Commissioners yesterday approved the appointment of Dr. Henry A. Swanson as a member of the Board of Dental Examiners of the District. He succeeds Dr. Charles T. Bassett, whose term expires July 16.

Dr. Swanson was nominated by the District Dental Society and his term will be for five years.

Housing Discussed

Several changes in rooming house regulations and clarification of rules governing health, sanitation and safety in this respect were recommended at a meeting of the Washington Housing Association Thursday. At the same time the association indorsed a proposal providing for an elected delegate from the District of Columbia to the House of Representatives.

'All Work, No Play—'

Four hundred boys, members of the School Boys Safety Patrol, will be guests at 9:14 a. m. tomorrow of the North Washington Lions Club and Warner Brothers at a two-hour showing of popular movies in the Tivoli Theater at Fourteenth Street and Park Road Northwest. Short talks on traffic instruction will be given by Washington I Cleveland, District manager of the American Automobile Association; Inspector Arthur E. Miller, chief of the Police Department Traffic Division, and Inspector Richard Mansfield, retiring chief of detectives and noted traffic authority.

Naturalist to Speak

A talk describing his experiences along the famous Yosemite trails in the Sierra Mountains will be given by George A. Petrides, ranger-naturalist of the National Capital Parks naturalist staff, at the campfire program to be held at 8:30 tonight in Rock Creek Park adjacent to Sixteenth Street and Colorado Avenue Northwest. Natural color slides showing the scenic beauties of the area will accompany the lecture.

FWA Grants Fund to Start Nursery Job

$15,000 Provided To Renovate Two Buildings; $13,000 Previously Given

The additional $15,000 necessary to get contractors to begin work on the renovation of two District-owned buildings in the 300 block of D Street Southeast for day-care nurseries was granted yesterday by the Federal Works Administration.

Some $13,000 had been granted previously for the project which was to take care of children of mothers engaged in war industries, but bids submitted had proved that not one contractor was willing to bid for the work for the alloted sum.

Upon receipt of the supplemental grant, the District Commissioners immediately gave the contract to R. F. Bell, Hyattsville, who had been low bidder on the previously offered contract, even though his bid still was far above the sum then available for the day-care centers.

This center, along with other Lanham Act projects, is planned to begin operation soon after school closes, and already many applications from working mothers—whose small fees must defray half the operating costs—have been received.

National U. Class Hears Rep. Murphy

Intelligent use of newly acquired legal knowledge will provide a strong position in any courtroom if accompanied by complete and adequate preparation, Representative John W. Murphy (Democrat) of Pennsylvania told 54 graduates of the National University at its seventy-fourth annual commencement last night.

The graduates, including 8 District residents, and 37 members of the class now in the armed services, received their diplomas in absentia.

"To give law its full power," advised Murphy, "a proper survey, skillful preparation of plans and examination of witnesses, careful summation, a thorough review and a comprehensive brief are necessary factors."

The program opened with invocation by Dr. John W. Rustin, minister of the Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church. This was followed by a speech by Chester Martin Brasse, class valedictorian. Presiding and presenting the degrees was Dr. Leslie C. Garnett, chancellor of the University.

District residents receiving degrees were:

Master of laws—Hobart Roosevelt House, bachelor of arts, Nelson Frederic Shellady; master of laws—Thomas Richard Blake, Ellis Ullman Brent, Halford Goodwin Davis, Nettie Marie Dulberger, Henry Graves Pons, and Thomas Huffman Sherley.

The students granted the Bachelor of Laws degrees were the last members of a class which entered under the prior rules governing admission to the bar, and all future classes will graduate under the four-year plan with the requirement of two years of college work in prelegal education, it was announced by a school official.

Dr. Arthur Bevan Dies; Surgery Chief in Last War

Chicago, June 11 (AP).—Dr. Arthur Dean Bevan, 81, prominent surgeon once president of the American Medical Association and the American Surgical Association and director general of surgery in the United States Surgeon General's Office during the First World War, died last night.

Dr. Bevan was made an officer of the French Legion of Honor for his services as head of the A. M. A. in 1918. A graduate of Rush Medical College, he served four years with the United States Marine Hospital Service.

During the prohibition era Dr. Bevan stirred up a controversy by charging before a Senate investigating committee that 90 per cent of physicians' prescriptions for whisky were not legitimate.

Shiloh Choir Pays Tribute To Dr. Dett

By Ray C. B. Brown

The Shiloh Choir presents on Friday night in Shiloh Baptist Church a concert of Dett compositions with Dr. Robert Nathaniel Dett as guest conductor and pianist.

Shiloh Baptist Church was well filled last evening when audience and choir paid honor to Dr. Robert Nathaniel Dett who has consistently devoted an honorable career to making known to the world at large the beauties of Negro folk music. Not only in his published books of spirituals, but also in his own compositions he has pursued the single idea of revealing the richness of this literature and utilizing the melodic and harmonic singularities of the music of his people, always with an idealistic intent.

BROWN

Shiloh Choir, led by its director, Wilhelmina B. Patterson, opened the program of tribute by singing what is probably the most familiar of the composer's choral works, the anthem "Listen to the Lambs," based on a spiritual. Dr. Dett then took charge of the program as guest conductor in "Gently, Lord, O Gently Lead Us" and "Go Not Far From Me, O God," both admirably harmonized. The choir used a moving resonance of tone and a good balance of timbres.

Other choral numbers presented were "Son of Mary," "I'll Never Turn Back No More," "City of God," "Somebody's Knocking at Your Door," "Music in the Mine," "When I Survey the Wondrous Cross," "O Hear the Lambs A-Crying," "Don't Be Weary, Traveler," and Dr. Dett's effective arrangement of Thomas Campion's "As By the Streams of Babylon."

There were two interludes of piano solos, in the first of which Dr. Dett played three of his "Bible Vignettes" and the "Dance of Desire" from his "Enchantment" suite. The vignettes were interesting studies in portraiture. "Father Abraham" was neatly built on parts of Negro and Hebrew tunes, "Martha Complained" had humorous touches, and "As His Own Soul" dealt with the affection between Jonathan and David. In a second group the composer played the Prelude, Barcarolle and Juba from his suite, "In the Bottoms."

Jean McCandlish plays her Bachelor of Music recital on Friday night in Phillips Memorial Gallery. Program of compositions by Bach, Beethoven, Chopin, Debussy, Gershwin and MacDowell.

In Phillips Memorial Gallery last evening a friendly and admiring audience congratulated with applause Jean McCandlish on the occasion of her piano recital in fulfillment of the requirements for the Bachelor of Music degree from the Washington College of Music. The congratulations were strictly in order, for this talented young musician has made steady progress in technical security and, what is more important, in artistic finesse. Her playing has refinement, excellent taste and dynamic variety.

As was befiting an academic test, her program was mainly of the conservatory pattern with a Bach prelude and fugue, a Beethoven sonata, Chopin's F minor and E major etudes and B flat minor scherzo, and two of Debussy's preludes: "The Lass with the Lint-white Hair" and "Footsteps in the Snow." But she did insist upon two pieces by American composers: Gershwin's E flat minor prelude and MacDowell's E minor polonaise.

Norman Frauenheim presents a piano recital in the Washington Club on Friday evening. Program music by Bach-Liszt, Couperin, Daquin, Rameau, Schumann, Chopin and Debussy.

Norman Frauenheim, resident pianist, presented his second recital of the season last evening in the concert hall of the Washington Club. His program was made up of familiar works which did not fail to please his audience.

The major work, Schumann's "Carnival," was almost discarded for a Beethoven sonata which Mr. Frauenheim had played at his last recital and for which he had received many requests. The choice was put up to his audience and the "Carnival" was played. Difficult though it was on the hot evening, the suite was performed in a truly "grand" manner with all the fanfare and flourish that has made it a perfect ballet vehicle, smelling strongly of Barnum & Bailey with asides by Daumier. The "Carnival" makes a heavy call on strength and a varied style, both of which Mr. Frauenheim was able to supply.

The remainder of the program was not played with the consistent excellence of the suite. There were snatches of beauty, other moments were blurred by poor pedaling and erratic tempo.

Fairfield Builds Ship in 25 Days

The Bethlehem-Fairfield shipyard's 150th Liberty ship, the S. S. Pierre l'Enfant, was launched at Baltimore yesterday a little more than two years after the first keel was laid. The vessel required 25 days to build.

New Ban Put On Dogs After Rabies Scare

After the shooting of a mad dog yesterday by a policeman, Montgomery County officials yesterday placed a quarantine on all dogs in the Glen Echo Heights area for the next 90 days.

Under the ban, all dogs must be kept confined to their owner's premises or must be muzzled while running at large. The action was taken after Officer Joseph Ward shot and killed a dog described as a "mongrel" on Wyoming Road about three blocks from the dog's home. Neighbors, he said, had complained that the dog had bitten seven other dogs during the afternoon. No persons were attacked by the dog.

The dog's body was taken by the police to the animal husbandry department of the University of Maryland where Dr. C. L. Everson, veterinarian, said it was definitely rabid. He declared that a dog in that condition could travel 12 miles a day and advised that all dogs in the neighborhood be kept enclosed or muzzled.

In Washington the owner of a rabid dog was forced to pay $25 when he pleaded guilty before Walter J. Casey in Municipal Court of permitting the dog to run wild without a muzzle.

The dog's owner was Julius Adkins, 54, Negro, whose dog was accused of biting seven persons as they were walking along the 400 block of K Street Northwest.

Attorney Posts Bond

Attorney Edward Berger, 5338 Grant Street Northeast, was charged with larceny after trust yesterday and held under a $500 bond by United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage. Berger was charged with accepting $250 from a "conscientious objector" to be used as bond money in the event the man was criminally prosecuted.

Billy Roosevelt Cleared

Media, Pa., June 11 (AP).—William Donner Roosevelt, 10-year-old grandson of the President, was discharged in custody of his mother today, the fatal shooting of Lewis Hutchinson, jr., 11, termed "a closed case" by Judge Albert Dutton MacDade following a two-hour closed hearing in Delaware County juvenile court.

Spotted Fever Claims First Victim in Area

First fatality of the season from Rocky Mountain fever in the District area was announced late last night by Dr. James G. Cummings, chief of the communicable diseases section, District Public Health Department.

Victim of the fever, also known as "tick" fever, was Francis Jackson, 13-year-old Negro boy of Lanham, Md.

The diagnosis, however, was "provisional," authorities at the Freedmen's Hospital, where the boy had been taken, said.

Ten cases of the disease had been reported in Maryland already this season according to the health department there, three of them being fatal, and all from Harford County.

State Health officials at Richmond, Va., reported last night that ticks which infest humans with Rocky Mountain fever, were said to be "most abundant" this year, and that 50 cases of the fever were to be expected. About 20 per cent of those in Virginia are fatal.

Health officials explained that humidity was favorable for the ticks.

About 8 to 14 cases are reported annually in the District, with from three to six fatalities, Dr. Cummings said.

He said that there was no fear of any great increase of Rocky Mountain fever, but that care should be shown by persons who had been in woods, or near streams, in cleaning themselves well after being exposed to the ticks which adhere to the body.

ODT Reports Dairies Pleased With Delivery Curtailment

Dairy operators and employes are in "full accord" with the District Office of Defense Transportation's recent restriction of wholesale and retail deliveries in the Northeastern gasoline shortage area, it was announced late yesterday by William J. Tobin, District ODT manager.

The ODT's action was effective May 27 and restricted all retail and wholesale deliveries and prohibited all Sunday deliveries except ice, fresh milk and cream.

Tobin said the accord was reached in a session Thursday attended by dairy representatives, D. A. Walker, secretary-treasurer and business manager of the Milk Drivers' and Dairy Employes' Local Union 246 and himself.

Recent trouble in deliveries over the ODT restriction, notably in Pittsburgh, Pa., and in New York, would not be duplicated here, Tobin asserted.

"The accord was entirely voluntary," he explained, "and very encouraging."

Those at the Thursday conference were Mike Burchell, Alexandria Dairy; Julius Marcey, Arlington County Dairy; Herman A. Schulteis and Clarke Diamond, Chestnut Farms Dairy, Chevy Chase, Md.; Samuel Harvey, Harvey Dairy; J. E. Ward, Lucerne Cream & Butter Co.; J. B. Wright, Maryland Farms Dairy; Charles C. Cramlick, Model Farms Dairy; L. L. Baker, Richfield Dairy; A. L. Thompson, Thompson's Dairy; Otto Phillips, Wakefield Dairy; A. B. Fletcher, Embassy-Fairfax Dairy; D. A. Walker, representing the Local Union, and Tobin.

The Milk Drivers' and Dairy Employes' Local is an A. F. of L. affiliate.

Ration Book No. 3 Applications Obtainable From Local Boards

Persons who failed to mail applications for War Ration Book No. 3 before the June 10 deadline now may obtain them at local ration boards, the District Office of Price Administration announced yesterday.

Local boards, however, will have nothing to do with the handling of the books except for the issuing of applications upon request, it was emphasized. Those who missed the deadline are urged to mail their forms at once to the registration center so that books may be issued at a later date.

Mass Blood Donations

About 40 building and loan officers and employes will give blood to the Red Cross at the Blood Donor Center next Tuesday, Martin A. Cook of the Enterprise Building Association announced yesterday. The mass donation is the second arranged through his efforts. The first took place last Thursday when 35 employes of the industry each gave a pint of blood.

Potatoes Arrive

The definite end of the potato famine in Washington was assured yesterday with the arrival of 17 carloads of spuds from Florida, South Carolina and California. The normal consumption of potatoes in the city is five carloads a day.

I.O.O.F. Gives Ambulance

Grand Master Edgar W. Parks of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows last night presented to the Army Medical Corps an ambulance which had been purchased by the subordinate lodges of the I. O. O. F. of this district. The ambulance was accepted by Col. John B. Klopp, of the Surgeon General's Office. An inscribed plate went with the ambulance.

Fatality Spurs U.S.--Va. Parley On Jurisdictional Issue

District and Virginia officials will meet soon to discuss the age-old question of jurisdiction over the "No Man's Land" area of nearby Virginia, Senator Pat McCarran, chairman of the Senate District Committee, said yesterday.

McCarran announced that he would call the conference yesterday afternoon after a Virginia motorist was killed in a crash near the Pentagon Building, and Washing, Federal, military, park, Arlington County, Pentagon guards, and Virginia State police all shied away from the case because of the questionable jurisdiction.

Eustace Bayne, 50, of Lorton, Va., died shortly after his car collided with a gasoline truck on the Federal property. Removed to Emergency Hospital by the Arlington County Rescue Squad, he was pronounced dead on arrival. Police from all the various jurisdictions were on the scene, but none seemed to want to take action or to investigate the death. It was later decided that it was a matter for the military police assigned to the Pentagon Building to handle.

Shortly after the accident, McCarran said that he would call a meeting and seek measures to correct the boundary question, but would give no further details of the proposed conference.

It's About Time

Dimout for New Lamps

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

The light that has failed right now is, of course, the decorative lamp base, full of priority metal. We are told that there will be no more familiar bases for the duration, a fact that should inspire us to give a second glance to our present supply of household lamps—their condition, their approximate life-span (and what we can do to lengthen same) and a general review of our lighting situation of the moment. Luckily there is no ceiling on imagination, and busy fingers and quick wit can contrive pretty and exciting lamp shades to give even the oldest lamp stand a new lease on life.

Right now might be a good time to reclaim those large bases, dear to the hearts of the decorators, which add such dash and variety to the home front and won't deplete the precious supply of metal lamp bases. Old vases, tall and serene, make magnificent lamp bases (and conversion materials are still available). Old pottery bowls, tea canisters, antique oil lamps, pewter and brass pitchers and buckets, cut-glass pitchers (for odd and pretty bed-table lamps), wooden tubs, old churns, Victorian wonderments known as bric-a-brac—such things are still to be found in second-hand marts and in attics. These can be smartly converted into lamps. Luckily the trend, for some time, has been away from small dinky lamps and towards tall imposing numbers which cast a fine light and glow over your rooms. The second-hand bases are usually of this large and tall variety—so don't be afraid to experiment. Only be sure that the shade you buy or make is large enough to add dignity to your new-found base — instead of looking like a big lady in a coy hat!

New Materials

In the shops you will be sure to find all sorts of odd materials used for lamp bases—wood, flower pots, cane, sailcloth, cork, plastics, etc. Also we are assured that there is, at the moment at least, a comfortable backlog of fixtures and lamps on hands in the stores.

But, as with many other war-limited items, lack of lamps and fixtures is not holding down the imaginations of designers, and they see a bright beautifully lighted world of the future. There will be fewer lamps, but these will be more decorative, since functional lighting, built-in varieties and the like will do the necessary business of providing good light while the lamps will be used more for beauty than utility. Beds will have built-in night lights; desks, mirrors and dressing tables will have their own units. More important, perhaps, will be our entire approach to the lighting problem with more emphasis on the source of light rather than its accessories. Light, by special fixtures, will be reflected from the ceiling; entirely new effects will be achieved by having fluorescent tubes shining through the fabrics of your draperies—a sort of glorified lamp shade glow made possible by the cooler fluorescent principle. Family portraits will become shadow boxes; closets will no longer be dark and cavernous. Future decorations will work with light as dramatic additions to home living.

Fluorescent Light

Other sources of light will also be considered. Light engineers are excited about tentite, a plastic through which color and effect of fluorescent lights can be better controlled; in the past some people have objected to fluorescent lighting because it lacks red rays but this too-white effect will be controlled precisely in the future. Tenite will also help to vary the intensity of the fluorescent bulb. And then engineers will give a look to the type of windows you have in that future home; there's a new type which bends 80 per cent of the daylight upwards towards the ceiling, thus providing your day-time ceiling with the same reflective quality it has when you turn on your indirect lamps at night. It seems that present-day windows throw most of the light beams floorward, where they are absorbed and do no good. The new glass block window, with ribs of prismatic glass which line the hollow interiors, will prove a boon to long, dark rooms with unbalanced windows. . . . as well as to kitchens and laundries where good illumination is always a necessity.

The breathing spell lamp makers must take, during these trying days, is bound to have a fine effect on their imagination. Maybe it will even inspire really attractive lamps using the fluorescent principle; thus far this magic light has been used in industry or in homely units to the exclusion of smart fixtures for the home. We can look forward to improvements on the indirect floor lamp which hasn't been much for looks for all its practicality.

Grin and Bear It!

AP Features Writer

This summer is going to be different than any other you have lived.

You are sure to have more burdens—more work, anxieties and taxes. And you will likely have less fun—less motoring, travel, play, meat and sugar.

How are you going to stand the test?

Are you going to feel abused because you work longer hours, dwell in thought upon your fatigue, pity yourself because of your anxieties, and tell yourself a hard luck tale because of your taxes? Are you going to be glum because gasoline rationing has cancelled those weekend jaunts, blue because you haven't so much time to play any more, and sore over the meat and sugar question?

You don't have to. It may surprise you, if you have not thought of it, but the one thing you can be sure of right now is peace of mind, provided you are willing to put up a fight for it. All you have to do is live one minute at a time—and refuse to let it snow you under. After you have passed a certain number of them and find you are still alive, you will get the habit. And not only will you be happier, but so will everybody who lives with you.

Your Baby and Mine

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

Almost every child, enduring the strain of growing up, develops some habits which distress the parent. It may be fingernail biting, or lip-sucking, or the habit of knocking his curly head against the floor or wall, or thumb-sucking or nose-picking. Every one of them curdles the parents' resistance.

But, if there is one thing the parent of a 2 to 5-year-old child have learned, it is that attention to any kind of behavior magnifies its importance and makes it harder to dissuade the child against it. Even adults with peculiarities play up to them and we may be sure that the parent who acts shocked at a child's head-bumping, let us say, makes this a personal peculiarity which he wouldn't abandon for anything.

So, the first suggestion in dealing with any type of distressing behavior is to let the child think it doesn't matter to you at all. Your attitude should be: "This is your head, if you want to bump it, go ahead. In fact, perhaps you'd like a little help. I'll take a-hold of it and help you bump it."

It's not unusual, when the mother attempts this sort of help, with no malice, but only a desire to please the child discovers head-bumping to be something less than fun.

That doesn't mean that the parent really should be indifferent to them for they may well express some strains she could remove. While she watches the child bite his nails with no evidence that she is upset, she thinks to herself.

Is he nervous from lack of sleep? Has he enough interesting companions to stimulate his imagination? Does he have enough opporunity to play actively? Is he being scolded too much? Is he hungry, the kind of hunger that comes from a poorly chosen diet that is his fault or mine?

Substitute the name of any of the other habits and the questions are just as applicable. The parent cannot be indifferent when she must put her attention on the child's whole day.

Our leaflet, "Nervous Habits," may be had by sending a 3-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request to Myrtle Meyer Eldred in care of this newspaper.

Martha Ellyn's Platter Chatter

Chicken Noodle Pudding is extra special in goodness. It is made with a cupful of left-over chicken, noodles, enriched bread and so seasoned that it makes an unusually appealing dish. It takes little time to assemble and but 30 minutes to bake, so it is a time saver when preparing a meal.

If chicken, lamb or veal is the dish for Sunday, here's hoping that enough will be left over to make one cupful of it when chopped. This left-over meat can be so designed as to make a main dish that will carry on the Sunday flavor. Try making a Chicken Noodle Pudding, of if it is lamb or veal that is used then call it by another name. It will be just as delicious by whatever name it is called.

Martha Ellyn

Dinner Menu

Chilled Vegetable Juice
Chicken Noodle Pudding
Harvard Beets Cold Slaw
Baking Powder Biscuits Honey
Baked Apple Dumplings
Iced Tea

CHICKEN NOODLE PUDDING

Cook 4 ounces, about 1 cup, egg noodles in boiling salted water for 8 minutes. Cut crusts off 3 slices enriched white bread and pull into soft crumbs. Add crumbs to 1 cup scalded milk and beat with a fork until smooth. Add 1 tablespoon parsley, chopped, 1 teaspoon grated onion and juice, ½ teaspoon salt, 1 tablespoon butter, ¼ cup grated cheese and ½ teaspoon pepper. Mix well. Stir in cooked drained noodles, 1 cup chopped left-over chicken, lamb or veal and 2 egg yolks well beaten. Fold in egg whites beaten until stiff but not dry. Turn into an ungreased baking dish, set in a shallow pan of hot water. Bake in moderate oven, 375 degrees for about 30 minutes. When done, the pudding will look well risen, golden brown, and firm to the touch.

Countess Damita Zoltowska Sees New Era For Women of Europe When War Ends

By Genevieve Reynolds

Out of this war will emerge a new type of woman in Europe. Not only will she be more economically and socially independent, but also she will have a new set of values for life. Thus predicted tall, slim, graceful Countess Damita Zoltowska of Poland.

"The shut-in leisured or aristocratic woman will understand her working sister," she said, "for in many cases they will be working side by side, sharing their joys as well as their sorrows. Work will be honorable for all women—not just for the peasant or middle class."

Although she escaped the war in Europe—she was visiting her brother in New York before the outbreak, found it impossible to return and remained here—she senses the great changes taking place in the lives of her family and friends still left in Poland. "Those of us who missed the actual conflict shall never be able to understand the great tragedy of those caught in it," explained the youthful countess. "For that reason I must be able to give them a gift—a gift of new ideas and a new type of life found in the United States."

Like a Big Cocktail

When she speaks of life in this country, her expressive eyes light up with enthusiasm and happiness. "America is like a big cocktail," she exclaimed. "You put all nationalities together but you get one delicious flavor . . . so different from Europe where such mixing is always a combustion and frequently a war."

Only sinners would complain in the United States. It's such a paradise. If you don't succeed it is because of your own attitude, not for lack of opportunities. For if you fail in one place you can start again in some other place or different type of work, according to Countess Zoltowska. She herself is doing a good job at getting ahead in the business world.

Now she is a first-rate designer, holds a big job with a large New York business firm. When I talked with her at her room in the Mayflower recently, she had been showing and selling a group of fine dresses, many of which she had herself designed. She probably will be back in September with another group of her original designs. She refuses to sell a dress to a customer unless she thinks it is becoming.

Before entering the business world she studied advertising at Columbia University. In the meantime, she went to work with the Information Services of the Red Cross in New York City. Since she speaks fluently Polish, German (Viennese), French and a little Italian, she worked as a translator—still does.

COUNTESS DAMITA ZOLTOWSKA

Since becoming a career girl, Countess Zoltowska has learned to cook, wash out her own hose, clean her apartment—all the things that the working girl here has done for a long time. Also, she looks out for her 70-year-old father. And is she unhappy over her new lot? Not one whit. Her happiness and enthusiasm are sincere—very apparent. Her work is an adventure—not a drudgery.

Back in New York, she is busy designing a new apartment which will connect with her studio. On the terrace will be a victory garden—not flowers. The Polish artist, Arthur Szyk, is doing her paintings for the artistic new headquarters. But come fall, you will be seeing and hearing more about the countess turned career girl.

Warworkers Must Protect Skin From Irritants

Skin troubles are among the worst enemies of the men and women fighting America's battle of production. They cause the loss of valuable working hours which might otherwise be used to turn out more ships, tanks and planes. Medical supervision, good hygienic facilities and protective clothing are helping to combat these industrial fifth columnists, but one of the worker's best allies is simple soap and water cleanliness.

Very often skin troubles start when oil or grease blocks the pores and causes infection. Sometimes the skin is irritated by direct contact with chemicals. Certain substances such as naphthalene, petroleum, or benzol, cause trouble by dissolving and removing the natural skin oils. Or infections may come from contact with animal hides, waste products and other materials containing disease-producing germs. Substances harmful to some may be harmless to others. But if the worker is at all susceptible, a slight irritation may be aggravated to the point of infection if rubbed, brushed or scratched.

In Industrial Health Series Bulletin No. 1, issued by the United States Department of Labor, employers are urged to "constantly and continually emphasize personal cleanliness to the workers; provide washing and bathing facilities and individual lockers, and encourage change of clothes for work."

Rules recommended for workers are as follows: "Keep the skin as clean as possible. Remove oils and grease with thorough washing. Avoid unnecessary contact with irritating substances and solvents which remove natural skin oils. Avoid self treatment. See a doctor, for each case requires different treatment.

Memo To— Miss Brown

Home Is Where the Job Is

It doesn't matter whether your lonely heart is in the hills of Tennessee or the gardens of Brooklyn; you're in Washington now and honor-bound to make a good thing of it. Maybe your big problem is finding a substitute for the family homestead where social events of a purely spontaneous nature cook at any minute of the day or night. If it is, just look around at the "open house" doings in practically every part of the city.

The open house scheme was originated for just such as you—who want to go somewhere and do something but don't know where or what. One of the biggest things for you (and this is really for you)—is the Walsh Club for war workers. The club is a real dream of a place—located at the rear of 2118 Massachusetts Avenue, N. W. It's open for your inspection and congregating from three to ten p. m. every day, and there is plenty of room for reading, writing, listening to music, or just talking. And you'll find people to talk to, too!

Also for girls, especially (although Service women may crowd you a bit) are the two USO clubs operated by the National Catholic Community Service. The club at 1814 N. Street, N. W. is open from 10 a. m. till 11 p. m. for any sort of puttering which may strike your fancy. Of course, they have special events, too, but we'll stick to the home-and-fireside motif. There are such attractions here as sewing machines, games and writing rooms, ah, home was never like this! The new USO club at 1912 North Capitol Street is open from noon to 11 p. m. every day—till midnight Sundays, and you and your sister war workers are especially invited to come and lounge around.

Friendship House, at 619 D. Street, S. E., has all manner of things going on. If you want to give a look some evening, you may find some activities which particularly fascinate you; or you can just settle down in the lounge with a good book if you'd rather. Then too, if you don't find the sort of goings-on that you most enjoy, chances are you can have a hand in starting up some new ones.

The Jewish Community Center at 16th and Q Streets, N. W. offers miscellaneous facilities for those who just drop in—and make a special effort to entertain nightworkers who find the days a little drab. There's a special early birds social club such as you, meeting at 1:30 p. m. (just about getting-up time) on Tuesdays.

You probably think you know all about Y. W. C. A.'s, what with the one in your home town to remember; however, you haven't really seen a home-cooked atmosphere until you've investigated the club rooms, swimming pool, gymnasium and lounge at the Central "Y," 17th and K Streets, N. W. The Phyllis Wheatley Y. W. C. at 901 Rhode Island Avenue, N. W. also has club rooms, lounge and gym especially for Negro war workers.

Much more miscellaneous "home" stuff is offered in the churches around town. There's open house for instance, at the Church of the Ascension, 1201 Massachusetts Avenue, N. W. every Friday at 8 p. m. where you're bound to find something and some one interesting.

Then there's the Church Door canteen—something new under the sun at Calvary Baptist Church, 8th and H Streets, N. W. from 6 till 10:15 Saturdays. There are games, singing, records, refreshments, books and just about everything your mother might have cooked up for your entertainment on dateless week-ends. There are also Service men, which even she might not have managed to accumulate. The Mt. Vernon Place Methodist Church, at 9th and Massachusetts, N. W. holds open house also on Saturdays from 8:30 to 11:30 in the social hall, and you'll find a pretty lively bunch of young things about the place. Also some pretty lively doings.

At Emory Methodist Church, 6100 Georgia Avenue, N. W., there's an open house every Friday night at 8:30, complete with ping - pong, shuffleboard, visiting, group singing, dancing, and what not.

On Wednesdays, just to break the monotony of a six-day week, there's open house at Mt. Pleasant Congregational Church, 1406 Columbia Road, 7:30 p. m., with dancing, games, reading, refreshments and men.

So, you see, this "home away from home" story is a true one. If you sit around in a room full of uninteresting roommates and moan because you can't let down your hair and have fun, it's because you haven't been around. So, Miss Brown, get around! And don't trip over the welcome mats!

Mary Haworth's Mail

appears every day except Saturday in the Women's Pages. Tomorrow, in Section IV, Miss Haworth talks things over with a woman who chides her for "giving sanction to divorce," in her advice to many unhappily married couples.

THE GENTLER SEX

Stoking the Home Fires

By Malvina Lindsay

One of the last wishes of a New York soldier recently killed in action was to stroll up Fifth Avenue. "I wouldn't worry about cuffs on my pants or shoe rationing," he had written his mother. "I wouldn't care if I had only my long underwear on so long as I could be at home."

Another soldier in North Africa had written in his last letter before he was killed that he had been dreaming repeatedly that he was home.

Constantly comes the appeal from American fighting men in all parts of the world for "more mail from home." News correspondents repeatedly emphasize how home is the center of the universe to service men stationed abroad and how eager they are for news of it.

"Home is infinitely precious to the boys and they don't want anything to happen to it," wrote Brooks Atkinson of the New York Times following a tour of the Far Eastern battle fronts. "They like to think of it in terms of abundance and happiness for that is what they want to return to."

Homesick Soldiers Idealize America

Yes, it is probably the most homesick army ever assembled Ready and willing of course to stay on the job and finish it. But constantly living in anticipation of the day of all days, the return to Paradise—Home.

That should be both comforting and disturbing to those of us left at home. Comforting because of the knowledge that a Nation inspiring such sentiment should have been builded.

Comforting also because the men away think of us at our best. Fortunately they do not see us hoarding food, clothes and liquor; patronizing black markets; rushing in a panic to dry goods stores to make sure we are "safe" against clothes rationing; buying shoes (and consuming leather) we can get along without just to spend Coupon 17 and get all that is coming to us; whining about meals that would be Babylonian banquets to people of most other countries; fussing and "cussing" over gasoline restrictions, help shortages, trade inconveniences; tolerating war profiteers and labor dictators; playing politics in Congress and out just to get our man in power; damning the bureaucrats and making no intelligent efforts either to understand or to restrain them; evading tax responsibilities and letting them mount for the future; rounding up whipping boys as a means of disposing of our problems, and starting witch hunts as a prelude to a post-war madness.

Will Home Be What They Expect?

Yes, it is fortunate the absent men idealize us. But it is also disturbing. Can we make good when they return? Will we have kept home safe for them? Will this still be a land of freedom and justice, "abundance and happiness?"

Naturally we cannot have a Utopia waiting for the absent service men. But we can accept the challenge their vision of home has given us and mobilize our minds toward solving the internal problems we face. We can at least try to be meeting these with alertness and courage instead of merely drifting along waiting for George to do it.

We can realize that keeping the home fires burning means more than buying war bonds, serving as air-raid wardens, sewing for the Red Cross, saving our fats, or even working in war factories. It means bothering ourselves about public affairs and using our thoughts, our voices, our votes and our influence to keep home not only as usual, but better than usual. It means living up in our personal lives to the standards consistent with those of citizens of a land regarded as "God's country."

How heavy this responsibility rests on women, who not only predominate in numbers in the homeland but are the traditional makers and keepers of home! Something to make every woman feel a greater call to honor, courage, sacrifice. Something to make her say in the spirit of a great chastening, "I will go softly all my years."

New-Type Pink Eye Highly Contagious, Doctor Warns

By Logan Clendening, M.D.

WITHIN THE last two years there has been an epidemic of conjunctivitis, or pink eye, which has gone from one end to the other of the United States and has been especially prevalent in industrial plants, particularly those devoted to war industry.

The symptomatology, course and features indicate that it is not like any other form of pink eye with which oculists and general practitioners in medicine have been familiar for many years. It is highly contagious from person to person, which alone renders it different from most forms of conjunctivitis, which are only mildly or moderately contagious.

Most of its manifestations are also more serious than those of previously known forms. It usually begins with a low fever and general fatigue and aching of the bones. The eye at first feels as if dust, or a cinder, or some other foreign body has gotten under the eyelid. One eye is usually affected first, although in most cases the other eye becomes infected within five to eight days.

The eyelids swell and the white of the eye looks very red, although no pus is usually formed. Sometimes there are little membranes which, if removed, leave small bleeding points. The patient is sensitive to light and has to have the eyes closed with a cotton pad or bandage on them, and these have to be changed frequently because of the damming back of tears and other secretions.

In very severe cases the eyeball over the pupil (the cornea) becomes infected and in a few cases some scar tissue remains after the disease has subsided, but this is rare

The condition runs a self-limited course to full recovery in from 14 to 18 days. This occurs more or less without respect to whatever treatment is used.

The condition, as we have said, is very contagious and runs from person to person in a plant or a neighborhood. The incubation period is from 5 to 10 days; this is usually determined in plants where one individual is the source of the spread of the infection to others.

The person who has this form of pink eye is contagious and capable of spreading the condition to others from the time he begins to be uncomfortable. As soon as the acute symptoms have disappeared, he is probably no longer a source of infection. No germ has been discovered as yet in the secretions, although undoubtedly it is some kind of germ disease.

Treatment is palliative during the acute stage and the eyes should be kept clean with irrigations of boric acid or physiological salt solution. Local anesthetics have been used to control the discomfort and the irritating effect of light.

Under prevention, it is very important in any industrial plant that any individual with a red eye should be stopped at the entrance of the plant and sent to the plant physician to determine whether or not this form of conjunctivitis is present.

In some larger plants workers on duty are regularly inspected and anyone with red or inflamed eyes is sent to the medical office for examination. Anybody who treats such a case should be extremely careful that all instruments are sterilized between the times they are used on one person and another.

Your Figure, Madame!

By Ida Jean Kain

Imagine being able to pick up a complete dinner in a package at your grocer's, to pop it on the stove, and have it all ready to serve in 15 to 20 minutes! well, that is one cookery trick promised the homemaker when the war is over.

Right now, while you are struggling with shortages, points and prices, it should cheer you up to hear about the many marvelous conveniences that are being developed by the food industry. From what Mr. Paul S. Willis, president of the Grocery Manufacturers of America, told a meeting of the Home Economics Association in New York recently, the planning and preparation of meals will be a sheer pleasure.

It's quite true about that meal in a package. Mr. Willis tells us that it will consist of an assortment of frozen foods—more than 150 different kinds of frozen foods have been developed—and that the process has already been perfected. What is keeping it off the market now is lack of proper equipment in the stores.

Our home refrigerators will have a new freezing unit that will keep foods at zero temperature for months. You will be able to have a meal in the ice box ready to prepare. Won't that be something! Also, to speed things up, there will be a defrosting unit that will do the work in a few seconds.

You have been hearing a lot about the dehydrated foods and you are going to like them. You can serve an entire dinner of these foods without your family being any the wiser! Also, they will be sure of good nutrition for the dehydration does not waste a single vitamin.

The dehydrated foods will never take the place of the fresh products on the market, but will serve as supplements. There won't be such a thing as an out-of-season food! The dehydration makes a food more compact than usual, and now they are compressing the dehydrated foods so that they take up even less space. Mr. Willis says that compression is the topic that is going to set everyone talking. At present, of course, such developments are needed for our Army and lend-lease. But when we get back to normal, we are due for some pleasant surprises.

All in all, from Mr. Willis' predictions, a new America will emerge from the war. The conveniences we knew yesterday will seem about 100 years out of date.

Meanwhile, of course, we have some small inconveniences to put up with in order to win the war. But we should't complain. Shortages and all, our civilian food supply is the envy of the rest of the world.

'Action' Film at the Earle Glorifies Merchant Marine

Humphrey Bogart and Raymond Massey Costar In Thrilling Story of the Allied Convoys; Brief Stage Revue a Diverting Pastime

"ACTION IN THE NORTH ATLANTIC." Warner Brothers picturization of a story by Guy Gilpatric, adapted to the screen by John Howard Lawson, starring Humphrey Bogart and Raymond Massey, with Alan Hale, Julie Bishop, Ruth Gordon, Sam Levene, Dane Clark, Peter Whitney, Minor Watson, J. M. Kerrigan, Michael Ames, Dick Hogan, Kane Richmond, Chic Chandler, Noah Beery, jr.; Don Douglas, Art Foster, Ludwig Stossel, Frank Puglia, Dick Wassel, Iris Adrian, Creighton Hale, Elliott Sullivan and Alec Craig. Directed by Lloyd Bacon. At the Earl Theater.

PACKED with more excitement, suspense and thrills than any picture of recent vintage, the Warner Brothers might quite as well have abbreviated the title of "Action in the North Atlantic," which yesterday opened its first Washington engagement on the screen at the Earle Theater, to the single word, "Action." It is alive with it from first flash to final fadeout.

This stirring tribute to the American Merchant Marine, and the vital part it plays in getting the munitions of war to our allies on globe-circling fighting fronts, however, is more than any mere symposium of "penny-dreadful" sensations. It is presumably a fairly factual recital of what goes on when the convoys are set upon by Hitler's "wolf packs" and every ship has to rely upon its own resources and the skill of its officers and personnel to survive.

As we have remarked before, "Action in the North Atlantic" begins and ends on a high note of climax, with precious little anti-climax in between. The story is initiated by the torpedoing of a tanker and the ramming of the liferaft bearing the survivors by the Nazi U-boat that has done the dirty work.

The brief shore leave enjoyed by the captain, his first mate and the remnants of the crew is utilized to make plain the motives that actuate the men who go down to the sea in ships to persevere in the most hazardous of wartime jobs. The romance, humor and adventure of their lives ashore reflect the homely and honest sort of valor of which heroes are made. And there is not one among them who deems himself a hero or wouldn't sock you in the nose if you called him one.

So when the new Liberty Ship is commissioned, they all take on again and set out on a real adventure that stretches from Canada to Murmansk.

This second round of action is as informative as it is harrowing in its suspense. The film goes to some pains to deal minutely with the manner of assembling a convoy and the orders under which it operates, once under way. The international aspect of the United Nations' war effort also is heavily stressed by including bottoms of all the allied countries in the armada of almost 100 ships. But it is when the wolf pack sets upon the fleet and isolates the Liberty Ship that the fiber of American seamen really asserts itself. The game of hare-and-hound between the cargo vessel and the sub that has picked it out as its particular prey is productive of the sort of spine-chilling thrills that translate themselves into pride and cause one of the high command to remark, when the ship limps into Murmansk with most of its cargo intact, "That isn't a miracle, that's American seamanship."

Top-Flight Film Has That Sort of Cast

In casting this thundering saga of the merchant marine, the producers picked their players from the top of the lists. Humphrey Bogart, as the case-hardened first mate, who takes over when his captain is wounded, finds himself in a role perfectly matched with his castiron capabilities and plays the business with a sardonic humor and vigorous skill that places it among the foremost of his accomplishments. Raymond Massey, as the captain, matches his costar, stride for stride and skill for skill. Surrounding them are such adepts at both tumultuous action-drama and robust humor as Alan Hale, Same Levene and Dane Clark, a newcomer from the Broadway stage who, on the strength of this performance should be able to write his future tickets in his own terms. On the distaff side—considerably subordinated by the very nature of the picture—Ruth Gordon, as Capt. Jarvis' wife, and Julie Bishop, as Mate Joe Rossi's sudden love, manage to impart to the film something of the Spartan spirit that fortifies the wives of the men who have a job to do from which they may never return. Realism is heightened in the U-boat sequences by the superior judgment that decreed that the Nazi crews speak only in German. It doesn't matter that you haven't the slightest idea what they are saying; you wouldn't have had, if you had been there. An exceedingly effective touch. Ludwig Stossel it is who plays the sub commander so efficiently. Dick Hogan, as Cadet Robert Parker, incidentally, lends the film an exquisite touch of pathos. The whole thing, as we have meant to imply, is right out of the top drawer.

With "Action in the North Atlantic" consuming something in excess of two hours of cyclonic running-time, and even with the supplementaries stripped down to that "African Album" reel, there is left room on the bill for only the briefest of stage revues. Brief but diverting. Eileen Ritter and the Roxyettes get the lark going with a "Jingle-Jangle-Jingle," preliminary to introducing the Three Kings, two girls and a man, making their first local appearance and demonstrating that they are tops among the equilibrists. As headliner of the goings-on, that veteran old-reliable among the jugglers, Bob Dupont, unbungs his barrel of ne plus ultra tricks to a running accompaniment of pantomimic comedy that won him a long string of bows at yesterday's first performance. Then the Roxyettes again, as cow-girls on a multiple flight of steps. And, as Miss Barrymore would say, "That's all there is, there isn't any more." But it is enough to round out a bang-up bill.

Take Part in Texas Premiere

Stars who took part in the world premiere and international celebration at the Harlingen, Tex., premiere of "Aerial Gunner," the spectacular Pine-Thomas production on Saturday, were Jean Parker, Mr. and Mrs. Chester Morris, Marjorie Reynolds, Barbara Britton, Johnnie Johnston and Gil Lamb.

With high-ranking Mexican and American officials participating, the gala opening of the screen drama Saturday night climaxed the two-day fete, which began with a full-dress military review at the Harlingen Armory Gunnery School, where most of the picture was filmed.

Work Ends Visit

Paulette Goddard had to fly back from a visit in Mexico City to Hollywood to do only two days of narration without facing a camera to wind up her work in Paramount's "So Proudly We Hail!"

Babel of Accents In Czech Picture

The babel of accents which confronted Frank Tuttle in the cast of "Hostages" posed a question in linguistic synchronization.

The characters in Paramount's best seller are German and Czecho-Slovakian. The original nationalities of the principals in the cast constitute a virtual melting pot of tongues. William Bendix is the only American-born among the principal performers.

But Not as She Appears in the Film!

JULIE BISHOP
in an alluring pose—all but that lion cub!—not at all suggestive of any scene in which she appears opposite Humphrey Bogart and Raymond Massey in the Warner Brothers production of "Action in the North Atlantic," which yesterday opened its first Washington engagement on the screen at the Earle Theater. The scenes in which Miss Bishop does appear, nevertheless, are thoroughly attractive and augur well for her future.

HEDDA HOPPER

Trained by Opposition!

Hollywood, Calif., June 11.—Jim Brown of Texas, signed with Paramount, but got his training in "Air Force" at Warners and in "Corvettes" at Universal. Warners wanted him for "Destination, Tokyo," but Leon McCarey looked at him and turned him down. He's now in "Padre" with Bing Crosby. I'm told that McCarey is paging Grace Moore for that picture. There's a swell part for her in it . . . Don't our girls have the worst luck? Imagine Rita Hayworth having to pay $500 a month for the support of her former husband . . . Greer Garson and Benny Thau are back together again just like they were before Richard Ney came along . . . Would you believe Martha Scott, star of "Our Town," would be doing "War of the Wild Cats" with John Wayne?

RITA HAYWORTH

No Influence

Bob Hope was playing a Southern camp when he met up with Jack Pepper and wanted him to join his tour. Naturally, Pepper, being in uniform, couldn't go without permission, so Hope managed a 15-day leave for him. And when he went on to the next camp, the general in command had to have the whole thing explained to him, then whispered to Bob, "could you wangle a pass like that for me? I've been trying to get one for two years." . . . While waiting for a big part, King Vidor gave Butch Jenkins a good bit in "America" . . . Sonny Tufts was switched from "Standing Room Only" to R-K-O to play in "Government Girl" with Olivia De Havilland . . . I asked Sam Wood what he was going to do when he finished "Saratoga Trunk." He replied, "Find a cabin in an impenetrable forest and sleep for a week."

Beat the Gun

Pretty smart of Metro not waiting until it had released "Russia," in which it was being very flattering. Metro took a sheaf from "Mission to Moscow" and public reaction, so halted production for a rewrite and reshooting. It's all right for Russians to whitewash certain things in their own country, but when you feed it to the American people as fact, it's like giving them a strong dose of castor oil . . . Just after Betty Grable gets four pages of leg art, Paramount clamps down on that kind of photography for Barbara Britton, who goes into "Dr. Wassell" . . . Allan Jones is back after a 2½-month tour of camps. The most fun he had besides singing was doing a magic act with Blackstone. He's started recording songs for "All Out for Rhythm."

Russel Crouse and Howard Lindsay aren't here for any studio job. In fact, they're practically thumbing their noses at Hollywood. But here's the laugh. They're looking at certain pictures for English actors so they can cast their new fall play. And for years we used to steal all Gilbert Miller's actors for our pictures—and he called us such bad names! . . . Joan Davis' daughter Beverly, whose lower lip was cut in a V-shape while skating, won't be scarred, after all . . . Wally Brown says you're only as good-looking as your stand-in. He was mighty proud of getting Fred Astaire's dressing room and Bob Taylor's stand-in when he started work in "Adventures of a Rookie."

Such Is Fame

Just when you think you're getting up in the world, someone slaps you down. Years ago Dennis Morgan worked in a Wisconsin lumber camp. The other day he had a letter from the lumber company, evidently sent to all former employes, urging him to return to his job, as wages are now at their highest peak! . . . Frank Kerwin threw a party at Sugar Hill for Dorothy Sebastian. Dorothy's just been made an X-ray technician at an aircraft plant . . . If Edwina Booth of "Trader Horn" fame is well enough to be putting on camp shows in San Diego, she's well enough to do a picture, if she can get one to do, which might swell a depleted bank account.

Skinnerisms

Cornelia Otis Skinner's finished her stint in "The Uninvited" and will go back East to write the history of her father, while coauthor Emily Kimbrough will do "Rover Girls in Hollywood." Emily claims Skinner weaseled out of it. Wonder why Cornelia wasn't kept on for technical adviser on "Kismet" . . . Cornelia told me that after a disappointing love affair, she wrote a poem with a religious flavor. It made quite a hit. So when she and the family were in Rome they asked for an audience with the Pope, and got it. He was very gracious, put out his hand to Otis, so Otis shook it. When Cornelia kissed his ring she broke a front tooth. Just then her mother started chanting in a strange language. When they got outside they asked why. "Well," said she, "I pretended it was Latin and wanted him to think I had no connection with you two."

The John Hubbards' 2½-year-old daughter Lois is in trouble with the Hays office. Seems Arthur Houghton of that organization is their next-door neighbor and the other day rang their door bell and said to Lois' mother, "Madame, I'd like to call your attention to your daughter. Something must be done to uphold the dignity of our professions!" He pointed to his front yard where little Lois was cavorting happily without a stitch on . . .

ROBERT MONTGOMERY

SPEECH: Lieut. Comdr. Robert Montgomery has seen action in both oceans. After an Atlantic engagement, Montgomery had shore-leave in London, and visited the House of Lords. The old hall was familiar to him, for when Montgomery appeared in M.-G.-M.'s "Earl of Chicago", the studio constructed a replica of the House of Lords, and every Hollywood actor with a British accent was hired to sit there . . . Between takes, Montgomery walked to the center of the set, and made a speech to the assemblage. His testimony revealed that his secretary had signed his name to many of the orders issued by Leon. "But this was with my knowledge and consent," said Henderson. "And if anybody should want to question it, I'll just say that the signatures were mine." . . . Then, as he left, Henderson added: "Those fellers are just trying to prove that the marriage was illegal because the bride's father didn't have a license for the shotgun."

VISIT: The other afternoon a New York visitor joined the line of tourists at the Empire State Building, waiting to see the view from the tower. His wife remained in the lobby, because she has a phobia about looking down from high places . . . Her husband paid the entrance fee, followed the tourists to the tower, saw the view, posed for a souvenir photo, and then waited in line to sign the registry, "The Duke of Windsor."

FAME: In a recent movie magazine article about Suppressed Desires, Betty Grable confessed that the one man she wanted to have a date with is Vincent Sheean—so that she could take him around Hollywood and show him some interesting places and interesting people . . . Sheean already has seen a few interesting places and met a few interesting people—enough to fill three best-selling volumes of his adventures in every part of the world. Lieut. Col. Sheean, who was in Vienna when Hitler took Austria, in Prague when Hitler moved into Czecho-Slovakia, in France a few days before Hitler arrived, and was one plane ahead of the Jap attack on Wake Island, read that movie article in Africa, where he arrived with the invaders.

CHATTER: Mackenzie King will make a Fourth of July speech here, and this Nation will send an exchange-speaker to Canada on that day . . . A group of United States Senators will go to Yonkers on June 19 to observe the Hudson River launching of the "Steamobile," the new inexpensive cargo-carrier . . . A conference which may affect the '44 convention was held this week between Paul Lockwood, Governor Dewey's aide, and Governor Baldwin of Connecticut . . . Celeste Holm of "Oklahoma" is being signed for movie work . . . The agency official who sold Jack Carson to two radio sponsors for the same broadcast time is going to a sanitarium to rest his shattered nerves.

BUSINESS: Dialogue across three tables at the Stork Club this week betwen Frank Buck and John Ringling North: . . . Buck: "Well, I found one, but the price is $2,500" . . . North: "Wow, I never heard of one costing more than $1,500. That's all I ever paid" . . . Buck: "The market's tough these days. That's the best price" . . . North: "$2,500. Hmmm. That's an awful lot of dough for one. But I guess it'll have to be all right. Okay then" . . . Buck: "Okay" . . . So North bought the hippopotamus.

CRITICISM: George Jean Nathan, the drama critic, was invited to the premieres of the new shows at the Diamond Horseshoe and the Folies Bergeres, but refused to accept. "But these are musical shows," the night club press agents reminded him . . . "If you can imagine George Bernard Shaw, James Agate and Max Beerbohm sitting in a London basement at a table where food and drinks are being served, to write their criticisms," replied Nathan, "then I'll go."

Noted Dominican Composer Says Music Will Unite Nations

Dr. Enrique de Marchena, Here for Brief Stay Talks at Length on His Favorite Theory

By Elizabeth Henney

"Music is the politics of the future," says Dr. Enrique de Marchena, who has come to this country from his home in the Dominican Republic to help prove that idea.

It is not the first time he has visited here. He won a scholarship to Tulane University in 1932, following his graduation from the University of Santo Domingo (which is, by the way, the oldest university in the Americas, having been established in 1538).

Though he received his doctorate in law, he has done much in the realm of music since his university days. He is now the director of Radio Station HIN in Ciudad Trujillo and he is a composer, music critic and the founder of the Dominican Society of Composers and Authors.

Elaborating on his theme that "music is the politics of the future," Dr. de Marchena went on to point out that with more music there would be less need of politics; for, thinks he, as nations learn of each other's music they achieve a greater understanding of each other's minds and philosophies; and as that understanding grows, friction between them becomes less. In fact, he feels that the best approach to unity of nations is through music. He insists that music is nonpolitical and cites as an example that in spite of the United Nations' war with Hitler and our disagreement with his political notions, the music of Wagner and other great German musicians is still dear to our hearts.

Tosses Compliments To the United States

Tall, broad-shouldered, with pompadoured hair that is graying at the temples, Dr. de Marchena speaks English with a heavy accent and much enthusiasm, particularly when he is talking about his country and its recent accomplishments.

Someone must have advised him that he must be sure to tell the press how wonderful the United States is, for he carefully made many complimentary statements about our wonderful country, but it was when he spoke of his own country that he was most enthusiastic.

It is his firm conviction and, he says, the conviction of his country that a nation strong in the pride of its own customs and achievements makes the best of "good neighbors." And so, he continues, his country is establishing s c h o o l s—5000 of them, so far—to reeducate the people in the customs of their own country, its traditions and its cooking. "So," says he, "when the visitor comes to see us we can show him the best of the Dominican Republic, as we see your best when we come to visit you."

Insisting that he is strongly antipolitical, Dr. de Marchena is nevertheless enthusiastic about the present form of government, for, says he, this government has accomplished more in the development of the arts in his country in the last five years than had been done in the 80 years previously. He cites as an example the establishment two years ago of the National Symphony Orchestra of the Dominican Republic, which the government subsidizes to the tune of $2500 a month. The orchestra of 70 pieces is directed by Enrique Casal Chapi, who is a disciple of the Strauss type of music. As a balance for that is Edward Fendler, head of the Conservatory of Music and former conductor of the Societe de Concert of Paris. He leans to the classics of the old masters. But, working together, these two leaders of music have developed for the Dominican Republic a new type of symphony with the best of both classic and Strauss-swing woven into symphony music which is based on the folklore of the islands. And when he talks of that new music Dr. de Marchena grows positively lyrical.

Sees Popular Dance As Important Medium

However, it is to the "merengue" that Dr. de Marchena looks as the most likely medium to popularize the name of the Dominican Republic in this country. For the "merengue" is to them what the "rumba" is to Cuba, only more so, says Dr. de Marchena. It is the popular rhythm of the country, as fiery as the rumba, says Dr. de Marchena, and (he insists) much more graceful.

In fact, next year, when the Dominican Republic celebrates its centennial (they gained their independence on February 27, 1844, there will be special exhibition performances of the "merengue." The government has already offered large prizes to composers, writers, artists and school children for the best examples of their various talents, the winners to take part in the national exposition, as well as winning the large prize. And it was when he launched into a description of the proposed centennial exposition that he grew absolutely incoherent with praise.

However, at the moment Dr. de Marchena is making a tour of this country for the express purpose of seeing as many glee clubs and choirs as he can contact. He wants to learn how they are organized and run, so that he can take that experience back to help those organizations in his own country. For with his ardent nationalism goes the feeling that each country can learn much for its own improvement from other countries, and should.

As he says, "When I am in your country I give lectures to you about my country. When I return to my country I lecture to them about yours." He will lecture here at the Pan American Union on June 17 on the subject, "Music and Composers of the Dominican Republic." And he hopes, next year to be able to organize groups of merengue dancers to tour this country to "put over" the merengue here, as was the rumba.

WAAC Officer To Be Bride of Army Major

Col. and Mrs. Frank S. Besson of Camp Abbott, Oreg., announce the engagement of their daughter, Second Officer Jean Sharp Bessom of the Women's Army Auxiliary Corps, to Maj. M. B. Adams of the Army Air Force, son of Col. L. M. Adams, retired, and Mrs. Adams of Corpus Christi, Tex.

Miss Besson attended Gunston Hall in Washington and the Ogontz School for Girls at Ogontz, Pa., from which she was graduated in 1939. She was presented at the Cotton Ball in Memphis, Tenn., and made her formal debut the following winter in Galveston, Tex., where Colonel Besson was stationed as District Engineer. Soon after the organization of the WAAC, Miss Besson joined the corps and at present is on duty at WAAC headquarters in Washington.

Major Adams, a graduate of the United States Military Academy at West Point in 1939, returned recently from two years of foreign service and is stationed at Hamilton Field, California.

The wedding, at Fort Myer, Va., June 14, will be of interest to many service families. The bride's father was graduated from the U. S. Military Academy in 1909 and now is commanding officer of Camp Abbot and the Engineer Replacement Training Center there, the newest of three such centers in the Nation.

A brother, Lieut. Col. F. S. Besson, jr., is head of the Engineering and development section in the office of the chief of engineers in Washington, and another brother, Maj. Robert Besson, was taken prisoner by the Japanese during the Bataan campaign. Both were graduated from the academy.

Major Adams is the great-grandson of the late Brevet Maj. Francis Clark of the Twenty-second Infantry and grandson of the late Col. Milton B. Adams, Corps of Engineers and graduate of the academy in 1865, and the late Col. Frank B. Jones of the Infantry and graduate of the academy in 1879. The bridegroom's father, Col. Lewis Adams, was graduated from the academy in 1903 and served with the Corps of Engineers until his retirement in 1926. Major Adams has three brothers, Capt. Lewis J. Adams of the Coast Artillery Corps and Lieut. Frank B. Adams of the Army Air Force and Officer Candidate Edwin C. Adams, all of whom are on active duty.

Windsor Is Pal of Ducks At Night Spot

When the Duke of Windsor was Prince of Wales, he was known for his fondness for dancing.

It may still be his favorite recreation for all anybody knows, but while on his current New York visit it has been noticed by cafe society's bright eyes that not once has he trod a measure on the dance floor. Some say it's because of his fear of being conspicuous.

When the duke and duchess go dining they usually find the Ritz-Carlton Garden the most entertaining spot. There the duke has made new friends—the baby ducks which roam the garden. He feeds them bits of lettuce much to the delight of the ducklings and to the other patrons. Fortunately lettuce agrees with the ducks, who have in the past sometimes ended up as hospital cases when their diet was augmented by tasty but not always wisely chosen tidbits from the tables.

Recently the Duke and Duchess of Windsor have been joined by the duchess' "Aunt Bessie" Mrs. D. Buchanan Merryman, of Washington, who has a room next to their suite at the Waldorf Towers. Mrs. Merryman was with them the other night at the Ritz-Carlton Garden, the party also including Mr. a n d Mrs. Herman C. Rogers, at whose French villa the famous couple were married, and Schuyler Livingston Parsons.

Dutch Artist Honor Guest At Reception

Rapidly becoming a world art center, Washington turned out at the invitation of the Netherlands Ambassador and Mme. Loudon yesterday afternoon to meet the latest United Nations artist to exhibit in the Capital.

Between 6 and 8 o'clock a steady stream of guests poured into the Wyoming Avenue home of the Dutch envoy to greet the noted muralist, Gerard Hordyk, whose exhibit at the White Gallery was opened to the public yesterday.

Known for his murals and theater scenery designs, Mr. Hordyk is exhibiting here a group of oil paintings. He arrived from his home in New York for the opening but does not expect to remain until June 30 when the exhibit is scheduled to close.

Mr. Hordyk, who is a native of The Hague, took his first art training at the University of Delph and later at the Art Academy of The Hague. He moved his studio to Paris in 1927, where he remained eight years, holding his first exhibit in 1930 at the Gallerie Zak. His initiation to the United States came in 1935, when he showed his works at the Contemporary Art Gallery in New York.

The artist's next five years were spent in Amsterdam, where he gave a number of one-man shows. London has also often viewed his works. He and his American wife came to New York in 1941. This year his mural designs of the Four Freedoms, done for the United Nations Information Office, were on exhibit in New York.

Move Opposed

Office Fusion Of Bishops Urged Here

By Robert Tate Allan
Post Church Editor

Favorable sentiment for making an Episcopal presiding bishop automatically Bishop of Washington upon election to the highest office exists in Episcopal Church circles outside of Washington, we have learned.

Many churchmen favor that step, as well as moving the Episcopal National Council headquarters from New York to Washington, as the presiding bishop's seat is now at the Washington Cathedral.

Some local Episcopal leaders are said to oppose having a presiding bishop serve also as Bishop of Washington, feeling that the higher office would demand so much of his time that a Washington Coadjutor Bishop would be necessary to actively handle diocesan responsibilities.

Election of a successor of the late Bishop Freeman will take place at the triennial general Episcopal convention this October in Cleveland.

Good News for Navy Chaplains

A resolution urging that Congress adopt the Navy chaplaincy bill (H. R. 1023, aimed at placing the Navy chaplaincy on a par administratively with the Chaplains Corps in the Army) was voted this week at the quarterly meeting of the general commission on Army and Navy chaplains, at the First Congregational Church, Tenth and G Streets Northwest.

The commission, which acts as liaison between 29 Protestant denominations and their chaplains in the services, voted to "respectfully request" Congress to enact the proposal because "the effective administration of the chaplains' work requires that the Navy have a chaplain corps comparable to that of the medical service." The resolution asserts that the bill now before Congress will "go toward meeting" this need.

Hearings on the proposal are scheduled to begin soon.

"O GOD, OUR HELP IN AGES PAST"
. . . ISAAC WATTS . . .

O God, our help in ages past,
Our hope for years to come;
Our shelter from the stormy blast,
And our eternal home!
Under the shadow of Thy throne
Thy saints have dwelt secure;
Sufficient is Thine arm alone,
And our defense is sure.
This hymn, based on the Ninetieth Psalm is considered one of the best hymns of the "Father of English Hymn-Writers". An invalid, suffering much, Watts must have depended on God for his own help and strength.

Luther Place Memorial Church's Whitsunday service tomorrow will be dominated by the remembrance of that Day of Pentecost when the abiding gift of the Holy Spirit transformed a band of waiting followers into a witnessing fellowship of apostles. Significantly, on this day, a class of young people will be confirmed and a group of new members received at the 11 o'clock service.

The pastor, the Rev L. Ralph Tabor, will preach on "The Language of the Church." The choir will sing two appropriate anthems: "Send Out Thy Spirit" and "My Soul Now Bless Thy Maker."

For 4th Year

Pentecostal Pastor Returns Here

The return of the Rev. Hubert T. Spence as pastor of the Washington Pentecostal Holiness Church for a fourth year was announced this week following the annual session of the Maryland conference of the denomination in Cumberland.

The Washington church of which the Rev. Mr. Spence is pastor has engaged in an evangelistic program as one of the major activities during the past year. Growth in membership and enlargement of support of all church causes and related institutions were reported at the conference which was attended by the Rev. Mr. Spence, Mrs. F. D. Deremer and A. E. Robinson, sr., lay delegates.

Besides the pastoral services here the Rev. Mr. Spence is a member of the general board of his church, is a member of the home missions board of the denomination and has recently been chosen to serve the Service Home Commission of the P. H. Church as executive secretary.

Under the pastoral administration of the Rev. Mr. Spence the congregation has made a large membership gain and the church plant at 1015 D Street Northeast has been structurally improved.

KEISTER

At the request of Washington Lutheran pastors the Mission Board conducted a survey of the territory east of the Anacostia River from Anacostia to Benning. On the basis of this survey and with the advice and counsel of the department of research and survey of the Washington Federation of Churches, the Synod of Maryland of the United Lutheran Church recommended to the Board of American Missions that this area be entered with the intention of establishing a Lutheran congregation to serve the Lutheran and unchurched constituency there.

Pastor Keister was chosen by the Mission Board for this assignment and for some months has been calling on interested persons who with their friends are invited to the inaugural service this Sunday. Pastor Keister comes to Washington from his last assignment in Dayton, Ohio, where he organized the Lutheran Church of Our Savior.
